The Nineteenth Amendment is popularly celebrated for enfranchising half of all Americans overnight. But who actually gained the ability to vote after the woman suffrage amendment was ratified? In "Suffrage at 100," Liette Gidlow, PhD, explores the "long history" of the Nineteenth Amendment, connecting it to the voting rights struggles of the 1960s and today.

JAMES NEAL PRIMM LECTURE IN HISTORY

This annual speaker series brings to St. Louis distinguished historians to share their current research through public lectures, seminars and informal meetings. It is intended to honor James Neal Primm, Curators' Professor Emeritus of the University of Missouri–St. Louis.
