Vietnam Issue Predominates

The only issue to survive the student power rally Wednesday September 24, was the mobilization committee for the Vietnam war. This committee is headed by Gary Rich and aided by Dr. Mark Stern, assistant professor of political science. Other issues raised included the establishment of a student credit union, a more political student newspaper and a cooperative bookstore. Approximately 200 students attended the rally.

The UMSL mobilization committee which seeks to bring protest of the war by college students to public attention. In his speech at the rally at Bugg Lake, Rich outlined possible courses of action on the UMSL campus. "October 15 has been set aside for a national boycott of classes to show how we feel. We don't necessarily have to boycott here; just form something so we can do something. Nixon knows the power of students. He fears them."

Rich said the mobilization committee was attempting to bring in Alard Lowenstein, a senator from New York who, as a McCarthy supporter at the Democratic National Convention in 1968, was beaten in an elevator. Rich also said that Washington University was planning to bring in George Wall, a Vietnam war pacifist.

Bill Church, the chairman of the Student Workers Alliance, also appeared at the rally. Church introduced the subjects of the cooperative bookstore, political newspaper and student credit union. "The administration is here to help the students and the faculty, not the other way around. The credit union will give the students money and when you've got money you've got power," Church said. "We also need a more politically involved student newspaper. The Current covers events but it doesn't cover things like the grape strike or the rent strike."

UMSL Handbook Now Available

The new edition of the UMSL Handbook, which was not used during the new student orientation because of late delivery from the printer, is now available to students. Copies may be picked up in rooms 117 and 108 in the Administration Building, in the office of any academic dean, and in the Office of Campus Publications, room 50 Office Building.

The Office of the Dean of Student Affairs will be mailing copies of the book to all new students at their home addresses.

Mrs. Linda M. Mottin, Editor of Campus Publications, said, "This Handbook has been prepared to better acquaint students, faculty and staff with the facilities, services, policies and procedures of the University. Hopefully the Handbook will serve as a handy reference for all students and student organizations."

Danforth Nominations Open

by Sue Dorsey

Nominations are now open for Danforth Graduate Fellowships, to be awarded in March, 1970, are invited, according to Edward B. Costello, Associate Dean of Arts and Sciences, and the local campus representative.

The Fellowships, offered by the Danforth Foundation of St. Louis, Missouri, are open to men and women who are seniors or recent graduates of accredited colleges in the United States, who have serious interest in college teaching as a career, and who plan to study for a Ph.D. in a field common to the undergraduate college. Applicants may be single or married, must be less than thirty years of age at the time of application, and

Curators Okay Speaker Policy

The University of Missouri Board of Curators approved an interim policy concerning speakers on campus and in closed session approved the 1970-71 budget request for capital improvements and operating expenses at its September 26 meeting in the basement of Thomas Jefferson Library.

Reporters watched the meeting via closed circuit television, but the sound was cut off when the board was discussing personnel and budget matters.

The interim speakers' policy applies to all four campuses and involves speakers whose appearances are supported from University funds other than the regular academic budget.

William C. Myers, Jr., of Webb City, Missouri, presented the policy and emphasized that the regulations, designed to give the University of Missouri "a definite policy at this time," would be subject to change, pending advice from students, faculty, and administrators of the four campuses.

All the board members, with the exception of Judge Robert G. Brady of St. Louis, voted for the policy. Brady stated that the policy should not have been voted on "until the board can study it further. We as a board have only seen this today and have not had time to consider this," he said. "I believe we are going at it in too hasty a manner. I think this is purely a matter of policy. We should decide by ourselves and it should not be submitted back."

Board member Mrs. William C. Tucker of Warrensburg, Missouri, asked Brady if he objected to the policy statement along specific lines. Brady said he did, but did not wish to delay the whole meeting to go over the policy.

In a press conference following the meeting, board vice-president Pleasant R. Smith of Mexico, Mo., said of the policy, "As an interim policy, I think it is something we can live with."

He pointed out that until now the University has had no specific speakers' policy, and that the regulations used to fall under guidelines concerning the use of University facilities.

"This new policy will be sent to the faculty and student governments on the campuses," Smith said. "It will probably be next spring before we get recommendations back from those groups."

The board voted 6-1 to send the proposed budget request for operating and capital improvements funds to the Governor and State Controller. The deadline for submitting the request is October 1.

Board vice-president Smith told reporters later that he voted against the budget request because he "objected to some of the priorities in both the construction and operating expenses." He declined to discuss the request in specific terms until the Legislature released the figures. He promised reporters that he would discuss the budget request once the Legislature made the disclosure.

Smith explained that "historically" the board has not made public proposed budget requests of the University until the Legislature has seen the request first.

'Open Exchange of Ideas' Keynotes Interim Guideline

The following is the interim campus speakers' policy which the board of Curators approved September 26:

"The University is and must remain a forum for the free and orderly exchange of scholarly ideas and information.

"Freedom of inquiry into all areas of human knowledge and beliefs, be such areas currently popular or not, is basic to the search for truth.

"In order to insure freedom of inquiry for its students, this University is dedicated to the free and open exchange of ideas, beliefs and theories in its sponsored programs and activities limited only by such rules and regulations as deemed necessary to insure their peaceful and orderly expression, in an atmosphere of open exchange and under conditions conducive to critical evaluation of divergent points of view, and under circumstances and at times and places which will not conflict or interfere with the regularly scheduled functions of the University.

"It is the intent of the University that an appropriate balance of topics be expressed in sound academic approach to any subject or theory.

"When requests are reviewed and determined for use of University facilities or resources for outside speakers or programs, the above criterion should be taken into consideration.

"The President or his delegated representative may designate an appropriate senior faculty member to function as Chairman of the program and to conduct a free and impartial discussion following the presentation.

"All meetings and speakers are subject to all laws, University buildings and property."

Players' Auditions

Auditions for the University Players' second play of their season, Once Upon a Mattress, will be held this weekend. Friday auditions will be from 1:00 pm until 3:30 pm in room 102 Benton Hall and Sunday in room 105 Benton Hall from 7:00 pm until midnight. Anyone interested in working on the technical aspects of the production is invited to attend the auditions.

'Appropriate Balance' Needs Definition

It is good that the speakers' policy which the Board of Curators approved for the University (see page one) is considered temporary, because one phrase in the policy needs better definition.

The fourth paragraph states: "It is the intent of the University that an appropriate balance of topics be expressed in a sound academic approach to any subject or theory."

Just what is an "appropriate balance of topics" and who is to decide what is "appropriate" or not? These two questions must be clarified before the policy can be considered final.

The Current feels that where the funds for speakers are paid for by students, then the students should be allowed to determine the right "balance" of issues and personalities to be presented. And if the balance of topics does not seem "appropriate" to the curators or University administration, then it is too bad.

We can't help but feel that the policy was in part formulated by the board in reaction to the Robert Kennedy Memorial Symposium on Dissent held at the University of Missouri-Kansas City last February. It is no secret that some of the board members, in particular Judge William H. Billings, who is now president of the board, opposed the symposium because the speakers, including Tom Hayden, Harry Edwards, Staughton Lynd, Pete Seeger, were generally of the same political ideology.

If "appropriate balance of topics" means that this year student funds should be used to bring, for example, William F. Buckley, Mayor Daley, and Governor Lester Maddox of Georgia to the UMKC campus, then we approve, provided that the students--and no one else--decide on the speakers.

Appropriateness, we would suggest, is a matter of relevance. If the students decide that Harry Edwards is relevant to their culture while Lester Maddox is not, or vice versa, then so be it. An opposition viewpoint should not be forced on students solely for the sake of "balance," however.

The Current believes that students are capable of determining "balance" where speakers and issues are concerned, and that when student funds are used to finance the speakers, it is their right to do so.

A Bazaar Spectacle

A bazaar spectacle to watch is the "open" Board of Curators meeting. Not that anything at the meeting itself is bazaar, but the manner in which the press is allowed to cover it is.

Last year the board, after meeting behind closed doors for nearly a century, finally decided to allow for more comprehensive coverage by opening its meeting to the press. Unfortunately, newspapermen are still not allowed in the meeting place itself, but instead watch and listen via closed circuit television.

On two television screens appear the curators, seated behind tables and looking very small indeed. The cameras are stationary. No close-ups or zoom-ins.

The fun starts when the meeting does. When someone begins talking, it is difficult to determine just who is doing the talking. Reporters make the best of the situation by seeing who can first discover which curator is talking. The winner gets the most accurate story.

To make things even more interesting, the sound is cut off when the board is discussing personnel matters. Then the reporter who is best at lip reading has the advantage, provided he can see lips on the minute faces on the screen. Again, the prize is an accurate story.

The Current feels that the board should go all the way in opening its meetings. When affairs affecting the running of a state-supported institution are being discussed, the public has the right to be informed accurately and comprehensively. And the only way this can be accomplished is by removing the barriers which hinder the newspaper media's job, which is to get accurate and comprehensive information.

Reduce 'Potential for Conflict'

The two-page article "Potential for Conflict" Dr. Gilman's Survey Reports" in last week's Current quoted the survey as saying "... simultaneous comparisons of UMSL's students, faculty and administrators reveal that the background and opinions most sharply differentiate students from faculty." The report went on to say "... however, the magnitude of the differences . . . are too small . . . to suggest much in the way of serious problems."

The Current believes that one of the best ways to reduce a "potential for conflict" at UMSL is to involve students in the decision-making of the University. While it is true that the report stated that presently the amount of difference between students and faculty is slight, it may also happen that as UMSL grows the differences may become much greater.

For this reason we feel that now is the time to incorporate students into the administration of UMSL's affairs through the Faculty Senate. As UMSL continues to grow, bringing with that growth more problems, students should be involved in helping to provide answers to the problems.

To repeat the errors of the many larger and older universities which kept growing without giving the student a meaningful place in the academic community would be foolish.

"I've heard about their crowded classes but this is getting ridiculous!"

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

In your Sept. 18th issue you stated that I would speak at the Student Power Rally in behalf of the Congress for Student Involvement. The possibility of my participating in the platform as a member of CSI was being taken under advisement with members of the group and had not been confirmed at that time. A decision not to participate was decided upon by myself and members of CSI after the processing date of that issue. Though the Current published inaccurate information as to the confirmation of my speaking, I do not hold you responsible as I realize you were acting on information that was submitted to you by the coordinators of the rally.

Respectfully, Brian Costello
President, Congress for Student Involvement

Dear Editor:

As an alumnus of UMSL, I found your recent articles on the attempts to find a chancellor interesting. I would like to offer now what may be a fresh perspective. . . It seems to me that UMSL is searching with a telescope, rather than with the eye, which in this situation could provide clearer vision. There is an old truism that "familiarity breeds contempt." The Search Committee has surveyed the entire country looking for some new, exciting, superman chancellor. It is time to become realistic. It is time that we appreciate the quality that is already on campus. It is time that we realize that the present Acting Chancellor is indeed the perfect chancellor for UMSL.

Dr. Driscoll is a man committed to the excellence of UMSL, and what's more he has the experience to enable him to further the school's goals most effectively. If anyone has watched his recent appearances on television and at press conferences, I am sure that they must have been impressed by his leadership qualities. He is a dedicated and efficient administrator; but what is equally important is that he is a warm human being who is interested and involved in the problems and concerns of individual students. He is a man of compassion and a leader who has enough vision to know what needs to be done in the future at UMSL. Further, he is realistic enough to know what needs to be done today to help implement the improvements of the future. Perhaps a campuswide student meeting with a question and answer exchange between Dr. Driscoll and UMSL students is all that is needed to solve the pressing problem of who should be permanent chancellor. After the session, let there be a campus-wide vote (including students and faculty) to determine whether Dr. Driscoll should indeed be given the title he so completely deserves.

Sincerely, William B. Thesing
Indiana University

Dear Editor,

Nixon, the man who pledged to give this country the big change it wanted, has been in office nine months now. We have yet to see any significant change; his tactic of withdrawing our troops from Vietnam has merely been a token one, effecting no true change.

We are tired of being told about the "necessary involvement" of our country in this war. We are tired of having our men killed in a war that is not supported by the majority of this country. We are tired of seeing men kill innocent women and children. We are tired of seeing the young men of this nation being forced into the choice of leaving their country as a fugitive, facing a prison term, or fighting in a war they cannot condone.

We are tired of passively watching our own nation destroy and mutilate a helpless people. As a nation we are now aware that there are no true justifications for our past or present role in Vietnam.

The New Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam is mounting a fall offensive to stop the war. This step for peace will be demonstrated in a nation-

SNEA Has First Meeting of Year

The Student National Education Association will hold its first meeting of the year Friday, October 3 from 11:40 - 1:30 in room 308 BH. Students may bring their lunches, and refreshments will be served.

The meeting is open to education majors or anyone who may be interested in majoring in education. Education faculty members have also been invited to attend the meeting.

The SNEA's goals include informing the students about the field of education through speakers, workshops, film strips, field trips, and involvement with the surrounding community, as well as to make education more rewarding and meaningful for the students.

Concert and Forum

The Congress for Student Involvement will present a combination rock concert and political forum this Saturday, October 4 at 8:00 p.m. in the Blue Building. The concert will feature RUSH, St. Louis' only street band. Political presentations between sets will focus on the October-November national student moratorium and information on the two fall demonstrations on October 8 in Chicago and November 15 in Washington, D.C.

The Forum will be open for free discussion with anyone welcome to speak. Proceeds from the concert will go for transportation of the band to Chicago, where they will perform in Lincoln Park during the week of October 8.

Grad Meeting

All students presently enrolled in one of the graduate programs are invited to attend a meeting Sunday afternoon, October 5, at

Forest Park Readies For 'Day of Dialogue'

Classes resumed peacefully at Forest Park Community College Monday after a two-day suspension last week over an incident involving the school's administration and the campus chapter of the Association of Black Collegians.

At the same time, a Day of Dialogue for Friday, Oct. 3, was arranged by some faculty members to permit students to attend discussions on racism, freedom of speech, and the power structure at FPCC. There will be a regular schedule of classes on the Day, although the proposal has been cleared with the Administration.

The faculty members were part of a group that issued a statement critical of the administration's actions in the incident in the cafeteria last week. The group felt that if college president William Snead had not seized an allegedly obscene record used in a recruiting campaign, Eldridge Cleaver's Soul on Ice, that some students had claimed was annoying others in the cafeteria, a crisis over college authority and individual freedom of speech could have been avoided.

The statement said that the Administration's actions, contrary to established procedures, had violated freedom of speech. This "resulted in acts which protected the prejudices of some members of the college rather than defending the rights of others."

After Snead's confiscation, and ABC member grabbed it back, causing the chapter to be suspended on the spot. A threatened boycott at the school could have led to violence resulted in the closing of the school.

An agreement for the reopening had been announced Saturday morning. Details had been worked out in meetings last Friday between Snead and representatives of the ABC, the student parliament, the faculty, the staff, and the administration.

Six of nine demands issued by the ABC were indirectly met by the agreement. Included were a promise to work to double the number of black faculty members by next September, an effort to enroll a proportionate number of black students in health career programs, and a stipulation that a section of the library be set aside for Afro-American literature.

The ABC chapter was also reinstated as a campus organization and will be allowed to use campus buildings for their activities. Approximately 40% of the student activity funds "will be allocated toward black student oriented activities in areas of cultural events, social events, and student organizations."

Meanwhile, the campus echoes with discussion over the developments and whether the administration overreacted and then gave in to calm things down.

Promotions Given To Ten Members Of UMSL Faculty

A total of ten UMSL faculty members have received promotions which became effective at the start of the current semester.

Promoted to professor were Dr. Edwin Fedder, director of the Center of International Studies and a member of the political science department; and Dr. Fred J. Thumin, professor of management and psychology.

Promoted to the rank of associated professor were Dr. Robert Hight, physics; Dr. Donald A. Murry, economics; Dr. Arthur Shaffer, history; Dr. Jane L. Williamson, English; Dr. D. J. Zerbollo Jr., psychology; and Dr. Robert A. Schuchardt, accounting. Dr. Murry is also director of research and assistant to the chancellor.

Promoted to the rank of assistant professor of music was Evelyn Mitchell.

School Gets $9,500 Grant To Aid in Pilot Program

UMSL has received a $9,500 grant to support a pilot program for the development of supervisory personnel among Negro workers. The allocation will be matched by $4,750 in institutional funds.

The year long program will train a total of 50 men and women who have been employed a minimum of one year and who have demonstrated a potential for supervisory performance. This program has a goal of insuring that black workers are provided the needed skills to advance into higher supervisory positions.

A broad array of training methods, including role and sensitivity training, case studies, leadership motivation material and group dynamics, are scheduled to be used in the program.

Participants will be recruited from the public at large and through such organizations as the Urban League, the Human Development Corporation and the Industrial Relations Club of Greater St. Louis as well as individual black lay and professional leaders.

Nelson Cites Traffic Rules

According to campus security Chief James Nelson, parking is not usually allowed on the west drive of the campus, north of the library. The only time students should park there and on the hill northwest of the campus is when they are directed there by security officers during peak traffic days.

The Current has been advised that traffic violation notices are being given for the above offense.

Also, the security department says that all cars on campus should have parking permits or pay a daily parking fee.

Central Council Notes

Barry Kaufman, chairman of the Appointments and Elections Committee of the Central Council, is anxious to know of any student on campus who desires to become involved in student government in any way. Kaufman is in the process of compiling a list of all interested students, which will be used during the '69-'70 school year when appointments need to be made or elections held.

A "New Student" election is coming up, in which transfer and freshman students may seek election to the Central Council. Also, there are many appointments of students to be made to various committees and investigating teams.

Anyone interested is invited to go to Room 117, Administration Building, and fill out an application form with their interests and telephone numbers, and leave the form in the Central Council mailbox. Kaufman will contact each person individually.

The Central Council voted Sunday to approve the budget drafted by the Executive Committee. The figures released by treasurer Gail Goldstein are as follows:

Out of an operating budget of $2,900, $400 was set aside as a contingency fund. For general administrative purposes, $1,400 was slated for salaries, $700 for general supplies, and $400 for publicity.

In addition to the $2,900 in operating expenses, $4,000 has been allotted as a separate fund, to be administered by the Council, for assistance to various campus organizations.

The Central Council has formed an ad hoc committee to report on the problems of handicapped students at UMSL. This committee will compile information on special services and facilities that are needed in the classroom buildings and around campus. The committee hopes to complete its work in two meetings.

Students who feel that they can aid the Central Council in the report should contact the Student Activities Office, room 117 in the Administration Building, or call Jean Heithaus at 837-4765.

up before October 10 to take the Graduate Record Exam which will be given October 25.

Late in October a committee of five will review the written statements and may call the students for oral discussions.

On November 1, the screening committee will have narrowed the field to the five (or less) strongest candidates.

Approximately 120 Fellowships will be awarded in March, 1970. Nationwide candidates must be nominated by Liaison Officers of the undergraduate institutions by November 1, 1969. The Foundation does not accept direct applications for the Fellowships.

Danforth Graduate Fellows are eligible for four years of financial assistance, with a maximum annual living stipend of $2400 for single Fellows and $2950 for married Fellows, plus tuition and fees. Dependency allowances are available. Financial need is not a condition for consideration.

The Danforth Foundation, created by the late Mr. and Mrs. William H. Danforth in 1927, is a philanthropy concerned primarily with people and values. Over the years the work of the Foundation, while oriented toward these concerns, has taken varied forms depending upon changing circumstances and the presence of promising opportunities for constructive action. Presently the Foundation focuses its activities in two major areas, education and urban affairs.

CBS Correspondent Speaks on Vietnam

by Chris McKenzie

Come on all you big strong men Uncle Sam needs your help again, He's got himself in a terrible jam Way down yonder in Vietnam. So put down your books and pick up a gun, We're gonna have a whole lotta fun. -Country Joe and the Fish Country Joe and the Fish may perhaps not be this country's most eloquent and foremost war critics, but their well-chosen lyrics do get their point across. There is and has been dissatisfaction with the Vietnamese War, or more particularly this country's involvement with that war. Almost nowhere has this dissatisfaction been better voiced than by a man named David Schoenbrun, author of Vietnam: How We Got In, How To Get Out and three other books related to Vietnam.

American Involvement

Mr. Schoenbrun spoke last Sunday evening at the Ethical Society of St. Louis. His main topic, as one would expect, was American involvement in a civil war in Vietnam that it had no business being in. Schoenbrun, a former CBS war correspondent, first met Ho Chi Minh in 1946 after Ho had first led his people against the French following the Haiphong massacre in November of that year. He was also present at the decisive battle of Dienbienphu where the Viet Minh defeated the French, resulting in the Geneva Convention of 1954. The lecture was sponsored by the Business Executives' Move for Vietnam Peace.

Schoenbrun's lecture was one which comprehensively focused on American military involvement in a war, in a country, that it had no diplomatic or moral obligation to, in fact to a country that didn't technically exist. He said that America's involvement in Southeast Asia came about as a direct result of us overplaying "our role of responsibility in Asia," and as a consequence of our WWII victory which forced us into the position of compromising Vietnamese freedom for French aid in our fight against Communism in Europe.

Schoenbrun pointed out that former Secretary of State Dean Rusk said we were honoring a commitment we made to South Vietnam in the SEATO Treaty by our presence in Vietnam. This commitment was never an obligation for action, according to Schoenbrun, but for consultation. Also, our military and economic aid to South Vietnam in its civil war with the North is contradictory in one sense, perhaps in others. According to the Geneva Convention of 1954, there are no North and South Vietnams. "These titles are inventions of the State Department," said Schoenbrun. The 17th parallel was established as a temporary, military demarcation line to be erased by the 1956 elections. It did not divide the country into North and South Vietnam.

'Father of His Country'

Mr. Schoenbrun went on to talk about other misconceptions and wrongs which have taken place in Vietnam since Dienbienphu and have led the U.S. into deeper trouble. He mentioned such things as the French acquisition of Diem from a Belgian monastery to be president of a South Vietnam that technically didn't exist and, how Diem, the puppet of the French, prohibited the 1956 talks with Ho Chi Minh and the free elections only to later invite America into Vietnam's own civil war.

Schoenbrun called Ho "the father of his country, the communist George Washington." He mentioned how this might sound ridiculous to most Americans, but that in effect it was true. So true that Schoenbrun quoted from Dwight Eisenhower's own memoirs: "He never met anyone who didn't think Ho was the overwhelming choice of the people, and would poll 80% of the vote in a free election."

Money Spent in Vietnam

Schoenbrun brought up that in excess of 155 billion dollars has been spent in the last 5 years in Vietnam, but recently when a Senate committee was asked for 10 billion a year for all this country's cities, the committee turned the request down saying the money wasn't available. Schoenbrun had an observation to make on that committee's report, and this is it: "We don't have 100 billion for 10 years to rebuild the cities in America, but we have 155 billion for 5 years to destroy the cities of Vietnam."

"Outraged" was the way Schoenbrun described himself at the response Nixon gave to a reporter's question concerning his reaction to the October 15 moratorium and student boycott. Nixon responded that it would not affect in any way his or the country's policies toward Vietnam. Schoenbrun said it would be well for Nixon to remember what youthful protest did to President Johnson and his Vietnam War.

'Pride and Arrogance'

Towards the end of his lecture, Schoenbrun mentioned that once he heard a retort to his argument about Vietnam by a businessman who based his argument on the phrase every school boy of his generation had heard, "My country right or wrong." Schoenbrun said he believes that phrase ought to be struck from the English language and replaced with a phrase first used by a Missouri senator back in 1899 at the anti-Imperialist Convention in Chicago, called because of American annexation of the Philippines. It went: "My country, when right to be kept right, when wrong to be put right." "The pride and the arrogance of the American leaders," Schoenbrun said, are the only things keeping us in Vietnam.

Schoenbrun's plan for withdrawal is an "orderly retreat" in which 50,000 Americans would be taken out of Vietnam every month until none are left. This can only be achieved, he said, if the American public mount enough criticism of our present policies. Upon closing he urged strong support of the October 15 moratorium on Vietnam and student boycott of classes.

Administration of Justice Program Begun at UMSL

by Don Schwalke

Hidden away within the labyrinthine halls of the new Life Sciences Building is room 269, the office of Mr. Eugene P. Schwartz. Mr. Schwartz is the Program Coordinator for the newly formed Department of Justice which is offering a total of five courses under the heading Administration of Justice.

In an interview with Mr. Schwartz, this reporter was told that the decision to offer these courses was the result of a one year study investigating the need for higher education in law enforcement. This study was financed by a Federal grant. Prompting this study were two factors: that law enforcement and the whole field of administration of justice are citizen concerns and the question of the role of the university in dealing with community and statewide problems.

The conclusions of the study were revealed in the summer of 1968 and as a result a proposal was made to the Board of Curators for the development of a baccalaureate degree program. After the approval by the Board of Curators, the Extension Division then applied for a one year Federal grant to implement such a program. With the funds an acting director was hired and the program opened this Fall semester.

Department Being Selective

Mr. Schwartz feels that the interesting fact about this program is that it came out of the Extension Division "as sort of the listening post in the urban, rural, and the professional communities in terms of what are some of the problems of the state." It was through the Extension Division and the guidance of Dean Virgil Sapp that the program was developed. Mr. Schwartz felt this to be unusual for as he said, "Curriculum programs usually revolve out of curriculum programs."

The original proposal for this program was based on cooperation with the local law enforcement officers, the police chiefs, and particularly the Junior College District "... there were," said Mr. Schwartz, "officers from police departments going to Junior College which offers a two-year degree. They had no place to go after that and they were leaving the state. So Missouri was losing the better educated officer in many cases." To reduce the probability of losing officers trained in the Junior College District to out state universities, UMSL is accepting only eighteen credits because the Department of Justice is trying to be selective and accept only those courses which they feel are of a professional university level. The Department has resisted the transfer of technical non-university courses.

'A Well Rounded Student'

There are five courses offered presently. They are titled Administration of Justice - Social Institutions; Administration of Justice-Legal Institutions; Police Administration; Senior Seminars; and Senior Readings. To go with these courses, others in sociology, psychology, and political science are recommended. The total program is intentionally weighted toward the social science area instead of the technical police field. Mr. Schwartz believes "We are avoiding the error of many other universities... by stressing social science, human behavior, and public administration rather than a police science direction. In the courses themselves the emphasis is on constitutional law, civil rights, systems of justice, the role of law enforcement, and other related topics.

In the Spring of 1970, Dr. Gordon Misner will become chairman of what Mr. Schwartz hopes will be an expanded program. Mr. Schwartz will be the Program Coordinator in the Extension Division.

The objective of this program is to produce a well rounded student who has learned how to observe, have a system of research, have a knowledge of professional content, and how to make good objective decisions. "What we are saying is that a well-rounded education in social sciences and liberal arts produces this kind of individual." Mr. Schwartz said.

The program is also based on the interdisciplinary approach of the academician from various fields as well as the practitioner from various fields. "I think what we're saying is that administration of justice is not just law enforcement, but it also includes the field of legal rights, the judicial system and the rehabilitative programs," said Mr. Schwartz.

Throughout the interview Mr. Schwartz stressed that these courses were designed for all students who may be interested in taking one or more for electives or enrolling in the program. This was designed to allow the professional law enforcement people to mix with students of different attitudes and backgrounds. It should be noted that students wishing to take any or all of the courses available are not screened for past police records. Any student regardless of background, is allowed to enroll in the program. Mr. Schwartz stressed "Ours is not a police course."

The only criticism of the program has come from police officers who have had previous training at the city, county, or F.B.I. training academies and feel they should be given college credit for this training toward their degree. Mr. Schwartz explained that the Department of Justice feels that these are good technical academies but not of a university level in their courses. He said that normally this criticism comes from officers who are anxious to finish the program, but he also said "Ours is not going to be an easy course."

Method of Teaching

The method of teaching these courses includes lecture, text readings, outside readings, field visits to agencies in the area of administration of justice, and relevant films.

In setting up the program last semester, Mr. Schwartz used students as a sounding board to find out what they felt was needed in such a program. They reviewed publications and films and volunteered their reactions.

Problems that have arisen are those of officers having to juggle their work schedules to attend classes, difficulty with middle management in the police stations not arranging officers' schedules, and lack of funds to presently expand the program by enlarging the teaching staff with the quality of instructors required. A problem indirectly related is making the general public aware of the need for a more professional administration of justice community program.

Interdisciplinary Basis

One of the finest things observed Mr. Schwartz said, was the willingness of faculty from other departments to serve on an interdisciplinary basis within the program.

The instructors this year have backgrounds in the legal and social areas. There are no policemen teaching any of the courses. A judge is teaching the course in legal institutions and a corrections consultant is teaching the course in social institutions, for example. Mr. Schwartz said, "What we are saying is that others besides police officers have a right to teach in the field of administration of justice."

Criteria for selection of instructors is first, he must know his professional content; second, he should be recognized by his colleagues within his field; third, a person with interest in research; fourth, a background of practice in the professional field; fifth, a person innovative and creative enough to think of needs of the future.

Series of Institutes

To compliment the program, the Extension Division is running a series of institutes. In October on the 15th, 16th, and 17th at Parkway House, 3570 Lindbergh, The Second National Institute on State and Local Planning for Delinquency Prevention and Control, will be held. Mr. A.J. Quakenbush, Jr., Vice-President, Corporate Planning, McDonnell-Douglas Corporation and Mr. Nicholas Reuterman, Center for Study of Crime and Delinquency, from the Edwardsville Campus of Southern Illinois University will be the resource persons. A fee of $32.00 covers registration and luncheon on Friday the 17th. For applications and further information contact the UMSL Extension Division, Police Science Study Program at 453-5591. Mr. Schwartz has a policy presently under which any student may apply to any of the institutes offered on a non fee basis as long as it is related to his professional interests and other student work. For further details contact Mr. Schwartz at the above phone number. "We don't want to wait until our students are graduates before we let them get involved in the practitioners' problems. We feel that involving them now is just as important as waiting until they are 'qualified'".

Within the university the men who Mr. Schwartz feels deserve special credit for the existence of this program are Acting Chancellor Driscoll, Dean Bader, Dean Sapp and the Board of Curators. Without the leadership of these men such a program would not have been possible.

The Department of Justice does more than run classes on the Administration of Justice. Right now, through the Extension Division, the Department is conducting a statewide survey of municipal judges in cooperation with the Municipal Judges Association and the Missouri Bar Association. Also, they're conducting a citizen's survey on problems of children and youth in Jefferson County and a study of the Municipal Police Department. The staff of the Department provides national secretariate service for two national groups, the National Conference of Public Youth Agencies and the Law Enforcement Aerospace Agency. As Mr. Schwartz said, "We are not a narrow law enforcement program."

Magic Lantern Cinema Presents Varied Program

The opening of the Magic Lantern Cinema at 6350 Delmar should be of special interest to college students and faculty members. Introducing a unique concept in film presentation, the Magic Lantern is a cooperative effort between businessmen (Arthur Enterprises owns the theatre, formerly called the Tivoli) and members of the academic community, who are primarily teachers and students of film.

Miss Sara Jenkins of the Fine Arts Department is on the advisory board of the Magic Lantern Cinema. "The Magic Lantern program will be as varied as possible, including American and foreign films, new films and revivals," Miss Jenkins said. "The emphasis, however, will be on films which have not been shown in St. Louis before."

In addition to showing films of very high quality, Miss Jenkins noted, the Magic Lantern will serve as a total film center with a bookstore, a library of books and periodicals on film, and a service which will assist film educators.

"The theatre is available to film classes during the day and includes a seminar room for discussions. A further educational feature will be the program notes available at the theatre on all major films," she said.

The general admission price is $1.75 and lower rates are available if tickets are bought on subscription (ten tickets for $12.50, a $5.00 savings).

Currently showing at the theatre is Long Days Dying, a powerful, exquisitely photographed anti-war film starring David Hemmings. The film will be shown through October 4. Also showing is a retrospective shown of Jacques Demy films, the French director whose works include Umbrellas of Cherbourg.

Schedules for the Magic Lantern films will be posted on the display board outside the Fine Arts office, and anyone who would like further information is asked to contact Sara Jenkins in 320 Benton.

UMSL Receives Grant for Films

UMSL has received a $6,850 grant from The Arts and Education Council of Greater St. Louis to support an experimental program aimed at improving the cultural level and communications skills of UMSL undergraduate students. The program will be under the auspices of the English department.

Featuring the study of the film as an artform, the program will focus on cultivating the capacity for critical thought and expanding the composition skills of about five hundred randomly-selected freshmen during the 1969-70 academic year. The film study sections will be part of English 10, the traditional composition course that all undergraduates are required to pass.

Students in the experimental sections will view selected examples of a wide variety of art, popular and documentary films; meet three times a week for discussion seminars; and submit written themes analyzing films viewed.

"The average student comes to college with a somewhat limited capacity for critical and analytical expression. This is perhaps reflected most by an inability to write well," said Jane Parks, English instructor who will direct the program. "This experimental course will be an initial step toward the remedy of such limitations."

Miss Parks called motion pictures "a familiar, readily-available medium that can be both artistic and humanistic." She added that film analysis is a "potentially excellent stimulus to other meaningful cultural experiences which lead not only to the enrichment of academic life, but to the general enrichment of cultural leisure life as well."

CSI Sponsors Cultural Series In Student Annex

The Congress for Student Involvement (CSI) will begin its program to bring students and faculty back to campus this weekend. The student annex will be open on weekends to serve as a center for the university community.

The program will be divided into three parts: film presentation featuring popular classics (and possibly serving in the future as a place for local film artists to present their work), musical and dramatic presentations by students, and a meeting place for informal discussions for faculty and students.

The center will be open between 8:00 pm and midnight every Sunday until the success of the program is determined, in which case it may be open on Friday nights.

This week's program will include two W.C. Fields films and two local guitarists. Coffee will be available at ten cents but admission is free.

U. Players Announce Cast

The cast for Antonio Buero Vallejo's In the Burning Darkness, the first production of the University Players' 1969-70 season, has been announced. The major roles are Dianne Poeter, Elisa; Dennis Skerik, Carlos; Karen Weirs; Maria; Chris McKenzie, Ignacio; Donna Netherton, Dona Pilar; Doug Emory, Don Pablo; and George Dennis, Miguel. The smaller roles are being played by Paul A. Morris, Andres; Bob Singer, Pedro; Marla Marlow, Lola; Paul Civili, Alberto; Bev Nolte, Esperanza; and Tom Adranga, the father.

In the Burning Darkness is being directed by Dr. Marion P. Holt, chairman of the foreign languages department. Production dates are October 17-19.

Harriers Win First Two

by Dan Niskas

UMSL's cross country team won its first two meets of the season last week by almost identical scores of 19-37 over Blackburn College and 18-37 over Greenville College. The team with the lower score wins. In determining the score, the team's top five finishers comprise the total points.

The Riverman took four of the first five places to crush Blackburn 19-37. Kerry Robinson led the way with a winning time of 21:56. The fine performances of two freshmen, Frank Neal and Charles Lister, makes the future look bright.

Kerry Robinson took first place as the UMSL cross country team was victorious for the second time in as many meets. This time the Riverman defeated Greenville College 18-37. UMSL took the top four places in a surprisingly easy win.

Coach Berres, understandably pleased with this victory, said that he thought his runners were in better condition than Greenville's at this point. However, he noted that such may not be the case when UMSL meets Greenville later in the season.

The cross country Rivermen will have tough tests facing them the next four Saturdays. October fourth they will run at Chicago against UICC and Marquette. October 11 and 18 UMSL will compete in the Greenville and Culver-Stockton Invitational, and October 25 the Rivermen will defend their Championship in the University of Chicago Invitational, last year's Urban Alliance Meet. Other teams in the Chicago meet will be Wayne State, UICC, UWM, Grand Valley State of Michigan, University of Detroit, and University of Chicago.

Three teams of women volleyball players began play in their league Monday also. Tuesday, five teams of co-ed volleyballers began their league. The women's league will play their games on Monday and Wednesday while the co-ed group will play Tuesday and Thursday.

Soccermen Win 9-0; Face Quincy Saturday

by Brad Stevens

Coach Don Dallas' soccermen will be traveling Saturday to take on a tough Quincy College team. UMSL's booters will be shooting for their second straight victory after rolling over Greenville 9-0 in their opener last Saturday.

UMSL will have its hands full as Quincy has established a long, winning tradition for its team. Quincy has won the NAIA championship three out of the last four years, finishing as runner up last year.

Even after last week's easy win in which the Rivermen showed a lot of poise, Coach Dallas claims that against Quincy "we're still the underdog, but we've got a good chance." A victory for UMSL would be considered an upset and quite a feather in the Riverman's hat. It was this same UMSL team last year that upset a highly favored Rockhurst team 3-0.

On an overcast, windy day last Saturday UMSL kicked off its season by clobbering Greenville. After a somewhat slow start, Tom Fitzsimmons knocked in UMSL's first goal at 17:53 in the first period. Two and one-half minutes later Luis Campos railroaded another one in putting UMSL ahead 2-0 at the end of the first quarter.

In the second quarter UMSL battered Greenville's net with five more goals. Bill Naucke put the third tally in at 11:25 and Tom Tucker followed with two in a row at 12:07 and 13:15. Luis Campos scored his second of three goals at 14:30 and John Garland added another at 20:00 running up the score 7-0 at halftime.

Two other goals came at 21:00 in the third period on a penalty kick by John Garland, and Luis Campos scored his third goal at 4:30 in the fourth period.

The Rivermen machine-gunned Greenville with some 60 shots on goal in comparison to four shots on goal by Greenville.

"It wasn't much of a game," commented Coach Dallas as UMSL had Greenville pinned in its own half of the field about 90% of the time.

The Rivermen will really get a good chance to size up their team Saturday.
