Nader addresses consumer issues

Kevin Curtin
co-news editor

Ralph Nader, consumer advocate and self-billed "full-time citizen," spoke to a capacity crowd Wednesday, Oct. 20 in the J.C. Penney Auditorium.

Highlights of Nader's remarks included a call for the reassessment of the national economic evaluation process, the need for consumers and individuals to band more tightly together, and an increased awareness among college students of their own capabilities and resources.

"Economists emphasize product and capital," Nader said. "There is virtually no emphasis on the consumer side, only the selling side. The gross national product obscures a lot of realities. It does not have a qualitative aspect to it. For example, injuries and fatalities on our highways generate a surge in insurance premiums, automotive repairs, hospitalization and medical, and legal fees. But if the number of injuries and fatalities doubles over the next year, certainly the GNP will increase and some call it progress. Can you walk up to someone bleeding on the highway and say, 'Cheer up, fella, at least you're contributing to the GNP?' That's not the way an economy should be developed."

Nader seeks prevention of costly expenditures in order to free consumers' incomes so that they may purchase better schooling and housing and improve the quality of life.

"In the final analysis, the judgment of any economic system is to be made by assessing the health, safety and economic well-being of consumers, not the well-being of sales curves by manufacturers," Nader said.

Throughout his lecture, Nader implored students to question the material presented to them and their motivation for getting an education. He said that good grades and better careers are desirable, but that they are not necessarily means to a better end.

"We need critical, analytical people who will work for a stronger democracy in our society," Nader said. "If we're not effective citizens, then we're not going to have an effective economy. Seek employment where you can bring your conscience to work with you."

Nader also said that complacency must be pushed aside if social aspirations are to be achieved. He said that consumers should go out into the various markets thinking as both consumers and manufacturers, so that accurate decisions could be made. He was critical of media advertising techniques and ingredients labeling on food products.

He finished the analogy by stressing the economic importance of being a well-informed consumer. "The average family can effectively cut its food budget by 30 percent and eat more nutritious food through consumer activity and more educational efforts. It is conceivable that strong consumer-group action could effectively alter the entire food link."

Nader reminded the audience not to be intimidated by automobile salesmen and their selling techniques. He said that a series of intelligent questions will give consumers safer cars for their dollars and lower insurance premiums for the future.

Nader also briefly reviewed the history of consumerism. "What we've seen in the last 15 years is a tremendous awareness by people everywhere of corporate injustice and abuse. There is no more passive acceptance of corporate right or wrong. Stage Two, where we are right now, is to get some protective laws passed. Corporate crime is at an epidemic level. Special-interest groups have to be checked. Campaigns should be publicly funded. But today, we see that organized power is coming to the forefront. A counterattack is needed now. Consumerism could very well have worldwide, climatic, geopolitical and economic consequences."

Nader advocates the formation of citizen utility boards through the utility companies themselves. The state of Wisconsin recently passed legislation requiring the utility companies to enclose a utility board application with each bill the company issued.

Nader finished his remarks by announcing the availability of a book concerning the current administration. The book is titled "Reagan's Ruling Class: Portraits of the President's Top 100 Officials." It was written by two Nader staff writers and includes a forward by Nader.

"We need critical, analytical people who will work for a stronger democracy in our society."

Tampering alleged at Homecoming polls

Homecoming election ballot boxes were tampered with on the second day of the election, election officials have acknowledged.

According to Curt Watts, an adviser for the program board, and Jim Weis, student chairman of the election committee, ballots were taken from the poll in the University Center and several of those ballots reappeared in the boxes later. Watts is fairly sure of the identities of the persons involved but declined to disclose their names, saying they had not yet been notified.

Both Watts and Weis are convinced that the problem was taken care of and in no way affected the outcome of the election.

"The results that were announced were completely valid,"

Weis said.

Watts added that neither of the winning candidates, David Foote or Karen Brown, appear to have been involved in the incident. "That was one of our main considerations in being confident to go ahead with the elections," Watts said. "Had it come up that the person involved was winning, we might have had to take another look."

Of the 126 ballots missing from the polls, 88 still have not been located. The other 38 were recovered from the ballot box, according to Watts. He said that they were able to determine which ballots were invalid by the manner in which they were dropped into the ballot box.

"The people who did it weren't real quick," Weis said. "Most of the ballots were folded together, and some weren't folded at all."

Senate meets

Surcharge, science building discussed

Kevin Curtin
co-news editor

The University Senate met Tuesday in Room 126 of the J.C. Penney Building. Highlights of the meeting included remarks by Chancellor Arnold B. Grobman concerning the rise in the student surcharge, and discussion of plans for the new science building on the campus.

Chancellor Grobman reinforced his stand on the increases due to go into effect next semester. "Reductions in income can be met by reducing expenditures, which I believe lowers the quality of education," Grobman said, "or by increasing income; that is, raising student fees. Students will pay for the quality of the reduction for the rest of their lives, but they will pay for the surcharge only once."

Grobman said that many factors were involved in the surcharge decision. "Missouri is 50th of the 50 states in per capita tax collections. Our national economy is such that it reduces tax bases. And a decline in the college-age population has forced us into hard times."

Grobman is seeking new guidelines for orderly change in the university policy with regards to budget reductions. He said that the same policies regarding tenure or academic grievances have some application towards handling budget reductions, and he urged students and faculty alike to cooperate in voluntary reductions.

M. Thomas Jones, associate dean of the College of Arts &

Sciences and chairman of the Science Building Planning Committee, then reported to the Senate that the new building requires 100,000 square feet of space, more than the original plans called for. Jones said four departments — chemistry, biology, physics and psychology will share the building. In addition, the UMSL Computer Center and the University of Missouri-Rolla Graduate Engineering Center also will be housed in the new complex.

The Building Planning Committee has submitted a detailed, 700-page report to James R. Buchholz, University of Missouri vice president for Administrative Affairs. The Board of Curators is expected to select an architect for the building at its December meeting.

newsbriefs

Books exhibited in Gallery 210

An exhibit of books by distinguished contemporary artists will be on display Nov. 3 through Dec. 3 in Gallery 210 on campus. The exhibit is titled "100 Artists' Books from Franklin Furnace: Representative Works from the Archive."

A reception to open the exhibit will be held Wednesday, Nov. 3, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Clive Phillpot, director of the Library of the Museum of Modern Art in New York, will speak at the reception. He is a member of the Board of Directors of the Franklin Furnace Archives and has lectured widely and written extensively about artists' books.

The exhibit also contains books by artists who have been involved with the printed word as concept art, including John Cage, Sol Lewitt, Lucas Samaras, John Baldessari, Agnes Denes, Edda Renouf, Dick Higgins, Ed Ruscha and others. An additional feature of the exhibit will be rare and unusual examples of both national and international periodicals related to the visual arts.

The gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Monday through Thursday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday.

The exhibit is partially funded by a grant from the Missouri Arts Council.

Course to prepare for law test

The Law School Admissions Test Preparation Course will be held on Saturdays, Nov. 6 through Dec. 2, from 10 a.m. to noon. The final session will be held Thursday, Dec. 2, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

The course is designed to help prepare students for the Law School Admissions Test. The material presented helps increase student's understanding of what to expect and helps them approach the test in a more relaxed frame of mind.

Registration fee for the course is $66. For registration information, call UMSL Continuing Education-Extension at 553-5961. For course information call UMSL Advising at 553-5300.

Personnel leaders to meet

The Student Chapter of UMSL's American Society for Personnel Administrators will hold its first general meeting Tuesday, Nov. 2, at 2:30 p.m. in Room 333 SSB. All members are asked to attend this meeting. Refreshments will be served.

The program will include proposals for society activities for the 1982-83 school year, a discussion of procedures for electing 1983 officers, and a report on the current budget. Committees will be reviewed and formalized.

Persons who wish to join the society may do so by attending this meeting and by bringing the required $25 for membership dues.

For more information contact Joy Moy at 553-6278.

Correspondence courses offered

Correspondence for college students as well as for professionals who want to keep up with new developments in their fields is available through the Center for Independent Study at the University of Missouri-Columbia. The center coordinates all the correspondence courses offered by the four UM campuses.

The curriculum includes more than 271 courses, including 163 on the university level. Those offered range from basic lower-division courses in English, foreign languages, history, mathematics, science and the social sciences to graduate-level courses in education and health services management.

Many of the courses are graded by a system called Computer Assisted Lesson Service. Answer sheets for each lesson are scored electronically and returned to the student with instructional comments prepared by the author of the course. The system is designed to speed the grading process and assure uniform evaluation standards.

Copies of the 1982-83 Independent Study catalog are available from the Center for Independent Study, 400 Hitt St., Columbia, Mo., 65211, or by calling 882-2491. Students may enroll in independent study courses at any time.

Alzheimer's workshop held

A course on Alzheimer's disease will be held at UMSL on Fridays, Oct. 29 through Nov. 12, from 1 to 4 p.m. in the J.C. Penney Building. The registration fee is $54.

This workshop is part of a series of continuing education courses in gerontology. It will introduce the working professional to the medical, cognitive, and psychological aspects of Alzheimer's disease, an irreversible neurological disorder which strikes and estimated 600,000 to 1.2 million Americans a year. The diagnostic process necessary for careful identification of the disorder will be discussed and an overview of supportive treatment methods for Alzheimer's patients and their families will be provided.

The instructor will be Warren Danziger, project director of the Memory and Aging Research Project in the department of neurology at Washington University Medical School.

For further information or to register, contact Deborah Factory, Continuing Education-Extension, at 553-5961.

Sir Angus Wilson gives lecture

Sir Angus Wilson, English writer, teacher and critic, will give a lecture on "Dickens and Dostoyevsky" Wednesday, Nov. 3, at 11 a.m. in the J.C. Penney Auditorium.

Wilson is a visiting professor of English for the fall semester at UMSL. The 69-year-old novelist was knighted in 1980 for his services to literature. He has written critical studies of Dickens, Kipling and Zola. His most recent novel, "Setting the World on Fire," was published in 1980. Two earlier works, "Late Call" and "The Old Men at the Zoo," have been filmed for British television.

For more information about the lecture, contact the UMSL English department at 553-5541.

Bosley seeks UMSL students' support

Sue Rell
assistant news editor

Freeman Bosley Jr., democratic nominee for clerk of the Circuit Court in St. Louis, spoke to an informal discussion group of UMSL students Monday in the Black Culture Room.

U.S. Rep. William Clay, of the 1st District also was scheduled to speak but did not attend the discussion.

Bosley is a native of St. Louis and currently resides in north St. Louis. He attended school in St. Louis and graduated from Central High School.

After attending St. Louis University and graduating with a degree in political science and urban affairs, he went on to St. Louis University Law School and graduated in 1979. He currently is associated with the law firm of Bussey and Jordan. He is 28 years old and unmarried.

"I decided to run for clerk because I found some flaws in the office," Bosley said. "I found that through talking to people that the majority of them didn't know the current clerk and that they didn't know about the clerk's job. It was an educational experience talking to the people, not only for me but for them, while I was also gaining some support."

The present clerk has been in office 14 years. Each term in office is four years. "I found that through research," said Bosley, "that no one had ever run against him before. I decided to take my case to the people and tell them what I found in the clerk's office."

"One thing I found is that he had lost the city $100,000 in interest by keeping funds in low-interest accounts," Bosley said. "I felt that the office was not doing the job that it should be doing and that the person in the office is not doing what he should be doing."

Bosley said there was one reason for running for clerk. "Many said I hadn't paid my dues yet or that I wasn't old enough to accomplish anything. But my job is not to take no for an answer," he said. "Many people thought I was crazy for running against him or for even thinking I could run against him," Bosley said.

If elected, Bosley plans to reconstruct the third floor of the circuit clerk's building (located at 12th and Market) for private adult abuse cases. He said that there presently are 350,000 abused spouses in Missouri each year. Currently, when a spouse comes to file a complaint the whole clerk's office can listen in on the complaint."

"Being a lawyer I have seen how important the small-claims court is in St. Louis," said Bosley. About 35,000 cases are filed there each year. The system now at the clerk's office handles more than 300 cases a day. The day preceding the court date the docket is set and files must be located in that time before court the next day. "I would like to prepare the court dockets a week in advance so that office employees have enough time to dig for the files and thus eliminate the inconvenience to those who must take off work to appear in court."

Bosley hopes to begin a microfilming department again. "In the clerk's office the floors are buckling under the weight of all the files." He explained that there are still files in the office from the turn of the century.

"I was lucky to get the endorsement of the Post, Globe and most of the black papers," Bosley said. "I have had good treatment from the press. I think I was victorious because of that publicity."

Bosley has been involved in politics for 10 years.

"This is how I won," said Bosley

Nader speaks out on issues at press conference

Kevin Curtin
co-news editor

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader held a press conference prior to addressing students Wednesday, Oct. 20, in Room 126 of the J.C. Penney Building.

In his opening statement, Nader strongly endorsed Democratic state Sen. Harriet Woods over the incumbent, Republican Senator John Danforth.

"The contest between state Senator Woods and Senator Danforth presents an important difference in philosophy and political records," Nader said. "Senator Woods has displayed a supreme dedication to the problem of consumers, the elderly, and the people of her constituency. Senator Danforth, contrary to his rhetoric back home, has time and time again voted for the powers and needs of big business verses the rights of individual consumers and citizens."

"Senator Harriet Woods is more deserving of the position," continued Nader, "in contrast to Senator John Danforth, who is more like the U.S. senator from Exxon, not Missouri."

Nader then fielded queries from the reporters concerning consumer issues of the 1980s, tamper-resistant packaging for over-the-counter drugs and standardized tests administered to college students.

"The consumer issues of the 1980s," said Nader, "are organizational issues. Price fixing, deceptive practices by insurance companies, credit terms by the banking industry and toxic wastes are large-scale problems. Effective, full-time advocacy institutions need to take their rightful place in the national economy."

Nader asserted that big businesses are consumers, too, and their problems cannot be ignored. He said that big businesses are consumers of products similar to those of individuals, such as legal services and energy costs. Nader stressed the importance of developing cooperation between commercial consumers and individual consumers.

Asked to comment on the recent Tylenol safety scare in Chicago, Nader said that "Consumers should demand that the Food and Drug Administration implement tamper-resistant packaging, but consumers should also demand more truth in advertising, as most over-the-counter medications are not effective anyway."

Nader is critical of college standardized tests as well. "These tests are poor predictors of student performance in college and graduate school," Nader said. "They clearly discriminate against students from low-income families. These tests

Weis said that the openings in the tops of the boxes are not large enough for unfolded sheets to be put in. Some ballots were slipped in on the side of the box, he said.

Queen candidate Janet Strain reported to Watts Thursday afternoon that she had seen someone stuffing the ballot box in the U. Center lobby. Strain said that as she stood in the lounge, she saw a student approach the ballot box and place several sheets of paper into it, in full view of two poll workers.

"It made me really mad," Strain said later. "So I confronted him with what he had done. He said that I shouldn't worry, that he had voted for me do not measure success in school or in life in general. We have to get rid of the multiple-choice format and replace it with a broader gauge test that evaluates what a student knows and de-emphasize the importance of the tests as accurate measurements of a student's capabilities."

Nader concluded the press conference by adding that he enjoys his work more today because consumerism has become more widespread and institutionalized. He also announced that his most recent book, "Reagan's Ruling Class: Portraits of the President's Top 100 Officials," is available to those interested.

anyway."

Strain said that student was a pledge member of a fraternity on campus, but declined to say which one. She did give his name to Watts when she reported the incident.

She said she still has doubts about the election. "I still wonder," she said. "But what could they do? The decision was left to me whether or not I wanted them to call off the election. I didn't think that would really be fair to the other candidates. They said that they had solved the problem."

I guess they solved it the best way they could have."

Watts will work with other administrators to discipline the persons involved. He was unsure as to whether there would be discipline taken against one or more individuals or an entire group.

"It's going to take a little time to get it worked out," he said. "Whenever students are going to be involved in running the elections, there's the possibility of them getting caught up in the excitement and taking matters into their own hands."

as he held one of the red, white and blue bumper stickers, "I didn't have enough money for billboards or things like that. By the time of the primaries my opponent had spent $180,000 and I spent only $10,000."

"I had a little money to buy 36 spots on the radio station KIRL and it turned out for my advantage. On Saturday morning I was on KETZ. My opponent (Yee Sutterfield) was invited to appear also but he never takes any of his invitations," he said.

Bosley intends to make the circuit clerk's office run as smoothly and efficiently and to keep the policies he campaigned for. "It is a risk of bettering the office that I may lose some friends," he said.

"My advice is take a concern in your government and find out what the people do," Bosley said.

Hey UMSL students, this election is for you

For every person between the ages of 18 and 24 who votes in the November general election next week, two other people will not vote. Over all age groups, less than half of those who could vote will do so.

It's a shame that so many people neglect this most important of civic duties. And this duty is especially important to UMSL students this year.

Nationwide, voter turnout at general elections has fallen significantly in recent years. In 1964, 69.3 per cent of those eligible to vote did so; in 1980, only 59.2 per cent voted.

But those figures are for presidential elections. Turnout at congressional elections, such as next week's, has been even worse. In the 1978 congressional election only 45.9 percent of those who could vote did so.

Less than half of the voting-age people elected the members of the 96th Congress in 1978.

Next Tuesday we'll have the opportunity to select the members of the 98th Congress. Also, 33 states, including Missouri, will elect U.S. senators.

Among other things, Congress appropriates money to federal student financial-aid programs. Many UMSL students benefit directly from these programs, which in recent years have been reduced by Congress under pressure from President Ronald Reagan.

One can hardly argue, then, that next week's election is unimportant.

Yet less than half of us will go to the polls.

Seats in the Missouri General Assembly also will be filled by the results of next week's elections. One of the General Assembly's functions is to appropriate state funds to the University of Missouri.

That is one reason why next week's election is one of the most significant of recent history to UMSL students. How we vote will determine the legislature's attitude toward the state universities. And the legislature's attitude helps determine the amount of funding the universities will get.

College students can be a powerful political force — but only if they make their opinions heard, through the ballot box.

Only about one-third of the people in the 18- to 24-year age group presently vote. Can you imagine the impact that this age group could have if its non-voting members vote next week?

But we aren't urging you to base your votes on a single issue (although education is a pretty significant issue to us). There are many other important local issues which you must address. These often have more direct impact than do national and international issues.

For example, several local propositions will appear on the ballot, propositions which will have a direct effect on you. You will be asked to enact user fees for parks, to raise the state sales tax for schools and to amend the Missouri Constitution among other things.

Voters in Tuesday's election will be asked to make many, many decisions. The St. Louis County ballots, for example, will be more than 10 pages long. County voters will be asked to decide at least 24 propositions — 13 state constitutional amendments and 11 county fee propositions — in addition to all the political office decisions. A voter could take from 20 minutes to a half hour or more to cast his ballot. Suffering even more will be Brentwood voters, who must decide, in addition to candidate elections, a total of 51 propositions.

The length of these ballots will mean that voting will take much more time than usual, and undoubtedly this will mean longer lines and longer waits at the polling places.

Knowing that the ballot is so long, some people who otherwise would have gone to the polls may not even bother. Of those who do go, some undoubtedly will become frustrated with long lines and choose not to vote after all.

Voter turnout likely will be lower in the general election of 1982 than of the elections of the past. And no wonder!

But why will this happen? Why is the ballot so long?

Many of the proposals appearing on next week's ballots were not on the ballots of past elections. Many of the decisions voters will be asked to make formerly were made by state legislators.

But the voters of Missouri chose to take that decision-making authority from the legislators in 1980, when the voters enacted the so-called Hancock Amendment to the state Constitution. It prohibits governmental entities from raising any fees unless the people affected by the increases vote to allow them.

The expected lower turnout partially will result from the burdens of the Hancock Amendment; this is just one of several negative aspects of the amendment, aspects which we have enumerated on these pages in the past.

Perhaps after this election, Missourians may wish to change or abolish the Hancock Amendment. Or perhaps they will leave the polls feeling that the amendment was a positive move, that they now have more control over the acceleration of state taxes and fees.

Whatever your own feelings about the Hancock Amendment and other issues, we hope you will choose to express those feelings at the polls. We hope the voters of Missouri understand the significance of this great privilege of voting, a privilege denied so many people in this world.

The privilege of voting, that of having direct influence in the decisions of our government, is perhaps one of those things that has been around for so long that we take it for granted. We need only watch the evening news, however, to see what life is like in countries where the people don't hold this privilege. We shouldn't take it for granted at all.

In 1980, it was claimed that Ronald Reagan was elected president by only a quarter of the people. About half of those eligible to vote did so, and a little more than half of that half voted for Reagan. Isn't it incredible that a quarter of the people made the decision for all of us?

We think it's a shame. And we hope that no matter how much trouble or inconvenience it is, you'll voice your feelings about the candidates and issues through the ballot box next week.

Lt. Gov. Kenneth Rothman told us at the "Day of Concern" last March that Missouri's lack of financial support for the state universities is partly our fault. We are to blame because only a third of people our age vote. Let's not forget that next Tuesday.

Needs help in cancer research

Dear Editor:

I am writing in order to request your assistance in recruiting volunteer researchers for the American Cancer Society's "Cancer Prevention Study II." The study is the society's second research endeavor to learn how life styles and environment influence cancer and other diseases.

The study is presently being conducted in St. Louis City, County and surrounding areas by approximately 500 volunteers. Nevertheless, in order for us to reach our goal of 14,000 completed questionnaires, we need approximately 1,000 more researchers than we currently have registered. They will need to ask approximately 10 family members, friends or co-workers who are 45 years or older to fill out the survey.

Those interested may call Ardith at 567-9730 or write the American Cancer Society at 2276 Grissom Drive., St. Louis, Mo., 63141, in order to receive the materials they need to lend us a helping hand.

Thank you in advance for your assistance.

Woods, Danforth compete for U.S. senate

Editor's note: This is the final part of the two-part election 1982 supplement. This week focuses on the six candidates running for U.S. Representative in the newly redrawn first, second and third Congressional districts. It also focuses on Senators John Danforth and Harriet Woods and their campaigns for the U.S. Senate. This is a highly contested race in Missouri and is drawing much attention from voters and the media.

This supplement will present the issues and platforms of all eight candidates.

Woods poses challenge for Danforth

As the November general election nears, Missouri congressional contenders are in a heated battle. This year a woman is running for the U.S. Senate, the first since Hazel Palmer of Sedalia ran as the Republican nominee in 1958. Palmer lost to Sen. Stuart Symington. Harriett Woods is running against incumbent John Danforth, who is running for his second term in office.

Woods received the Democratic nomination by defeating Tom Ryan, Mel Hancock, and her closest opponent, Burleigh Arnold. She defeated them by carrying 254,000 votes. In a field of 11 Democrats, she outpolled her nearest opponent by a 2-1 margin, and won St. Louis, St. Louis County and most rural areas, taking a total of 84 out of 115 counties across the state.

Woods, who is 55 years old, holds a philosophy degree from the University of Michigan and also has some journalistic background as a St. Louis newspaper reporter and a television producer.

Woods resides in University City, along with her husband Jim. She is the mother of three sons. Woods said, "My husband and I have raised three children on a very average income. We understand what it means to pay bills, send our children to public schools and worry about retirement income. At the same time, I have a public record people can look at."

The general campaign plan aims for expanding the success of the primary. She wants to develop the key issues — Social Security, concentration on unemployment and creating jobs, and "common-sense economics," — around which center her campaign.

Woods has concentrated her efforts on the Social Security problem.

She wants to insure the safety of the Social Security system. "I would oppose any cuts in benefits or cost-of-living increases. I think we can solve our problems with a few minor adjustments, like short-term borrowing, which can be replaced with interest in the 1990s when there are more contributors than recipients. I foresee the Republicans taking a look at Social Security and wanting to make major changes. I think the most important vote cast on the system will be made in the next session of Congress," Woods said.

She wants the nation to go back to "common sense" economics: a fairer tax structure, concentration on unemployment and creating jobs, consumer interest rates, and balancing the family budget.

Danforth fights to retain senatorial seat

co-news editor

A heated race for the position of U.S. senator is taking place this fall. Incumbent Republican Sen. John C. Danforth is being challenged by state Sen. Harriet Woods, D-University City. Danforth is running on his six-year record in the Senate, and the very close race is becoming a battle of incumbency vs. ambition.

In November 1968 Danforth ran for the office of attorney general of Missouri, which was the first elective office he sought. He was elected in 1968 and again in 1972. In 1970, he was the unsuccessful Republican nominee for U.S. senator.

Danforth ran again for the Senate in 1976. He captured 57 percent of the vote and became the first Republican elected to the Senate from Missouri in 30 years. In the Senate, Danforth serves on the Finance, Commerce and Governmental Affairs committees.

One of his major areas of concern is the cuts in student aid. "A second round of reductions in student financial assistance proposed by the administration should not be approved by Congress," he said. "The proposed reductions are not acceptable because they threaten to bargain away the economic future. We cannot afford any but the best-educated and best-trained new generation of Americans to grapple with the challenges of the 21st Century. Nor can we trifle with the basic access to higher education in a world geared increasingly to specialized and technical knowledge."

Some of the his recent projects in Missouri include:

—The Meramec Dam. He campaigned for the deauthorization of the water project in eastern Missouri, rejected by voters in a non-binding 1978 referendum. The deauthorization was signed into law in 1982.

—Wilderness areas. In 1976, Danforth pressed for wilderness legislation in the National Wilderness Preservation System. Danforth-Eagleton legislation enacted in 1980 extended wilderness protection to four areas encompassing 27,281 acres.

—Lambert International Airport. In 1981, Danforth announced the largest aviation grant in St. Louis history; the funding helps support Lambert's expansion and modernization.

—Lock and Dam 26. Danforth was the principal supporter of the modernization of the existing lock and dam and will propose legislation to authorize construction of a second lock at the facility, a key-stone of the inland waterways.

As a Republican senator, Danforth recently has focused his efforts to the nation's attention of the starvation in Cambodia. Before that, he bucked popular opinion back home by supporting the Panama Canal treaties. And last year, when many Republicans were active in the "right-to-work" campaign, Danforth won the admiration of labor leaders by joining Democrats in opposing the measure. He also was the first major political leader in Missouri to campaign against the Meramec Dam.

WOODS MAN: Ralph Nader expressed his support for U.S. senatorial candidate Harriett Woods at a press conference at UMSL last week.

Clay, Young, Gephardt seek reelection

U.S. Rep. William Clay is running for a third term in this election. In all three elections Clay has faced William White. He has beaten White each time. This year Clay will once again be opposing White.

White is one of the critics who has called Clay a "big spending Democrat." He feels that Clay is part of the problem of the failing economy. White says that Clay blames everything on everyone else and has not been responsive to the needs of his district.

Democratic incumbent Robert Young is running for his second term in the U.S. Congress Nov. 2.

Young has served in the Missouri House of Representatives and in the Missouri Senate. He was elected to the U.S. Congress in 1976.

Harold Dielmann, mayor of Creve Coeur, is running for U.S. Congress and hopes to represent the new 2nd district.

Dielmann is running for U.S. Congress with his record to back him up. Each term since 1966, Creve Coeur has had a balanced budget.

In the 3rd district, Richard Foristel is running against incumbent Richard Gephardt. This is Foristel's first attempt at public office. Presently he is the director of marketing for Burger Chef Systems in the western United States.

Gephardt is running for his fourth term as a U.S. representative. He was first elected to Congress in 1976 after serving as an alderman from the 14th Ward in the city of St. Louis. He presently is a member of the House Ways and Means Committee.

HELPFUL DAUGHTER: Mary Danforth, daughter of Sen. John C. Danforth, was on campus Monday to try to gain support for her father.

RELIEVED ROYALTY: Karen Brown and David Foote were crowned UMSL's new Homecoming queen and king.

Brown, Foote crowned at Homecoming dance

On Saturday, Oct. 23, at the Country Manor Banquet Center in West County, the UMSL Homecoming king and queen were named. The winners, David Foote and Karen Brown, both expressed gratitude to their supporters. Each feels that Homecoming should play a more important role at UMSL, and each wants to work toward larger, more successful Homecomings in the future.

"From this I'd like to be on the Homecoming Committee in the future, to plan Homecoming," said Brown. "I think people take it as a joke, because UMSL's Homecoming is very different from other schools. I think it should be known that all students have a place in the Homecoming, and I think UMSL needs to do other things to make the Homecoming more exciting."

One exciting aspect for Brown has been being the first black Homecoming queen in UMSL's history.

"It has been exciting. I have a lot of friends," said Brown. "I have black friends, I have white friends, but they are all friends. I'm just not in one particular group."

For Foote, this year's nomination was a surprise.

"I was really excited because I had no idea I was going to be nominated for Homecoming by University Singers," said Foote. "It just sort of happened. I thought that it was really great that people thought of me. It's a real good feeling to know that people like you."

Also at the dance, Tau Kappa Epsilon received awards for best lawn display and best ticket sales to one group.

Cadets survive wilderness training; chickens don't

On Saturday, Oct. 9, UMSL's Reserve Officer Training Corps combined with those from the campus of Washington University, St. Louis Community colleges at Florissant Valley and Meramec in field maneuvers. These maneuvers included exercises in rappelling, orienteering, wilderness survival and individual tactics training.

The ROTC program is divided into four levels corresponding to the number of years a cadet has spent in ROTC. The MS I's, or first year in Military Science, were taken to Weldon Spring for Wilderness Survival Training.

Lectures on shelter, poisonous plants and animals, wilderness trapping and cooking were given to the MS I's. After learning the best and most humane way to kill a chicken, they were given one to kill, clean, cook and eat. Most of the cadets weren't bothered by this. Karen Holloway, an MS I, said "it ain't so bad," as she cleaned the feathers off her bird.

Myra Strade seemed to think that it was all "cruel," but still she ate her lunch. Another very popular sentiment was expressed by Karen Brown. She said, "It's disgusting. I ain't gonna lie."

The MS II's took a trip to Rockwood State Park for a day of rappelling and orienteering where instructions were given on how to do all the necessary knot tying and techniques that are required. The majority of cadets there that day had no previous rappelling experience. Veronica Ross was ready to admit that she had some reservations about the whole matter but it didn't stop her. At the bottom of the beginners' bluff, which is about 30 feet high, she said, "It's all right, after the first step anyway." Veronica went on to go over the edge of the 90-foot bluff with very little problems and then commented that although it wasn't bad, it might be a while before she would dangle from another 90-foot cliff.

After lunch, which consisted of the traditional Army C rations of canned beans and franks, ham and eggs or ham and cheese, canned fruit, crackers and chocolate wafers, the MS II's headed off for the orienteering course. Here they were given a map and compass along with a list of points each group was to find.

The MS III's also spent the day at Weldon Spring working in the Tacts Lanes. The Individual Tactics Training classes were made to better prepare the cadets for

'Monsignor': a sinematic mess

"Monsignor" is the story of a consciously corrupt priest — an ambitious crook who supposedly has his heart in the right place. The Rev. John Flaherty (Christopher Reeve), the central character in director Frank Perry's latest film, is the ultimate hypocrite. He is supposedly a caring individual, yet he is callous enough to gun down throngs of enemy soldiers in World War II. He supposedly respects the authority of the church, but not enough to stop himself from heavily involving the Vatican — with the approval of an understanding, "progressive" cardinal — in the Italian black market. He is supposed to respect his clerical vows, yet when an attractive postulant nun (Genevieve Bujold) catches his eye — well, he just can't help himself.

Perry rushes through the initial scenes of the film as if he were ashamed of them, and he ought to be. One moment we see Flaherty taking his vows. The next moment we see Flaherty performing the marriage ceremony at his best friend's wedding. Then, in another swift scene change we witness Flaherty smack dab in the middle of World War II (the same scene transition was utilized much more effectively by Michael Cimino in "The Deerhunter"). All of the sudden, Flaherty, after administering the last rites to a dying buddy, grabs a nearby machine gun and begins blasting away at the advancing enemy.

These quick scene changes eliminate any possibility for initial character development. Who is John Flaherty? Why does a noncombatant slaughter fellow human beings? Rather than answering these crucial questions, screenwriters Abraham Polonsky and Wendall Mayes choose to confuse things a bit more.

Flaherty is summoned to the Vatican (yes, "the" Vatican), where he is rewarded for his "aggressiveness" on the battlefield. Archbishop Walkman (Robert Prosky), an American, pats him on the back and growls, "It took a lot of muscle to get you into this Italian monopoly." Before long, the gentle, forgiving, Cardinal Santoni takes Flaherty under his wing, gives him complete control of the Vatican commissary, agrees to his black market fund-raising scheme, and helps him rapidly climb the hierarchal ladder of the church.

Flaherty manages to involve the Vatican intimately with the Mafia. Flaherty manages to illegally raise big bucks for the struggling Catholic Church. Flaherty manages to seduce a beautiful postulant nun. This guy is amazing! Who would think that a "moral" priest could manage to accomplish all of these things in less than two hours and still be "moral"? But that's not all he manages to do!

In one of Perry's abracadabra scene changes, Flaherty becomes an aging Cardinal. We see him yelling at his secretary and cursing wildly into the phone. Outside his window a Catholic helicopter is landing, ready to whisk him to the Vatican where he is finally accused of secret financial wrongdoings in front of the pope (who is dying). The pope, being "the" pope, recognizes that Flaherty isn't such a bad fellow and excuses his long list of sins. The pope dies, Santoni takes the job, Flaherty becomes the Holy Father's right-hand man, the movie ends, and the audience sighs a sigh of relief.

film

by Steve Klearman

"Monsignor" is a terrible, uncohesive mess, with little or no redeeming qualities.

Christopher Reeve acts well at times; however, in this film he fails to convincingly bring out the subtle, ambiguous character traits necessary to portray a man like Flaherty. He is going to need to find much better roles in much better movies if he ever wishes to escape being stereotyped as Clark Kent.

Genevieve Bujold is marvelous, until she opens her mouth to speak. Bujold's Clara, a young, promiscuous nun-to-be, is confused about her nationality, and so is the audience. Is Clara English? Is Clara French? Is Clara Italian? Her accent changes so many times it's impossible to tell. It almost seems as if Bujold was primarily used for one semineude scene in the film and then forgotten about. One semineude scene does not a love story make. Somebody should have told Perry.

The best performance of the film comes from Fernando Rey, who fits right into his part — his Cardinal Santoni is a bit cunning, but always compassionate and tender.

John Williams' score is totally irrelevant. One wonders whether Williams saw the movie prior to writing music for it.

American moviegoers love corruption and that's why this film was made. There is something exciting about corruption — something evil and nasty and . . . sensual. Films about corrupt politicians are boring (a film about an honest politician would be exciting); films about corrupt cops are fun ("Serpico," "Prince of the City"); but a film about corrupt priests in the Vatican is downright sensational. And sensationalistic.

Perry's "Monsignor" has nothing to say about morality, about love, or about the church. It is an outrageous, confused mixture of bad writing, bad acting, and bad directing — it doesn't even have any good corruption to offer.

Kammergild opens fifth season

The Kammergild Chamber Orchestra will open its fifth season under the direction of Lazar Gosman Sunday, Oct. 31, at 8 p.m. in the J.C. Penney Auditorium. The Kammergild is the University's orchestra-in-residence.

The program, "An Italian Evening," will open with Concerto No. 1 in G major by Giovanni Battista Pergolesi. The evening will continue with Giovanni Bottesini's Grand Duo Concertant for violin, double bass and orchestra. Soloists will be Silvian Iticovici, violin, and Carolyn White Buckley, bass. Following intermission, the orchestra will perform Gian Carlo Menotti's Suite for two violoncelli and strings. John Sant' Ambrogio and Savely Schuster will be the soloists. Rossini's Sonato No. 1 in G major for strings will conclude the evening's program.

The Oct. 31 concert is the first of five appearances scheduled by the Kammergild during the 1982-83 season. The additional concerts will be Jan. 23, March 13, April 17, and May 1. Gosman will be the featured soloist at the April 17 concert at UMSL. Information about season tickets and individual concerts may be obtained by calling 553-5991.

active combat in a man-to-man situation. The objective was to teach the cadets to depend on the rest of the platoon as a whole and what to do if a key person, such as the squad leader, is wounded or killed. Through the uses of camouflage, teamwork and individual effort, an entire platoon could possibly come through a conflict unharmed.

Lessons in camouflage, maneuvering of a platoon through a "danger area" such as a road, open field, or any area which the enemy might have a clean shot, were given to the MS III's. This, however, is not very practical with today's long-range weapons and technology. Capt. Stephen

Rice explained that the teaching of situations on that level would be given to those cadets that elected to continue into the service in either active or reserve duty.

Approximately 10 percent of the cadets will go on to active duty with a slightly higher rate going to reserve duty. A significant portion of the ROTC program is made up of female cadets. Cadet 1st Lt. Kolburn Conway was impressed by the fact that female cadets are required to take the physical tests with only slight adjustments in standards. "I think it's their quickness in adapting to situations that impresses me most. Most of them would make great soliders."

As far as the concern of the Army turning women cadets and soliders into "brutes" rest at ease. It is as Cadet Karen Brown said, "It will only happen if it is there (inside the individual) to begin with."

HE SHOOTS: John O'Mara blasts a shot past the Oakland University goalkeeper in Sunday's game at UMSL. O'Mara's goal was the only goal UMSL scored, however, in a 3-1 loss, the loss ended UMSL's 11-game unbeaten streak.

Rivermen stall in weekend loss to Oakland U., 3-1

reporter

The UMSL Rivermen soccer team stalled, sputtered and clanked last week. The Rivermen's latest action saw them lose to Oakland University 3-1 Sunday after playing the University of Missouri-Rolla to a scoreless tie Friday night. The loss ended UMSL's 11-game unbeaten streak.

Friday night the Miners of Rolla came to UMSL to try to improve their own playoff hopes. They left in pretty much the same position they were in before they came to UMSL.

The score, 0-0, was indicative of how the game was played. With the two top teams in the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association meeting, possibly for the conference championship, it was a close match.

Both teams stayed fairly tight throughout the match and neither team was able to score off the other. The only thing that saved a tie for UMSL was the goalkeeping of Ed Weis. Weis stopped two Rolla chances late in the second half with excellent diving hand saves, pushing the ball safely out of play.

As someone once said, "All good things must come to an end." Well, UMSL had its good thing come to an end Sunday. Having a chance to extend their unbeaten streak to 12 games and just about lock up a Division II National Collegiate Athletic Association playoff berth, the Rivermen came out flat as a pancake.

The Rivermen played the Pioneers from Oakland University, ranked seventh in Division II of the NCAA, fairly evenly in the first half. Oakland jumped out in front on an early goal at 4 minutes 24 seconds of the first half. Just seconds earlier Roberto Fuentes had a chance to play the ball near his own endline but misplayed it. The ball went over the endline, allowing the Pioneers an always dangerous corner kick. They capitalized on the chance by heading the ball past goalkeeper Scott Graham off the corner kick.

After the first 15 minutes, the Pioneers seemed to let up a bit. Content with a 1-0 lead they appeared to sit on it for a while.

UMSL got its only goal of the whole weekend when John Pallet intercepted an errant Oakland pass in front of the Pioneer net. Pallet found teammate John O'Mara open, passed it to him, and O'Mara tied the game at 33:13.

Coach Don Dallas summed up the game when he said "Oakland scored when they had the opportunity and we didn't."

This was especially true in the second half. The Pioneers scored at 64:32 of the game on a breakaway off a long pass upfield.

The goal, however, that broke the Rivermen's back was questionable at best. With a Pioneer behind all UMSL defenders, he received a pass from a teammate and went in to score. UMSL protested for an offside call but it was to no avail. The goal stood and the final was 3-1.

The end of the season is rapidly approaching and the Rivermen have only two games left. Is it time to push the panic button? "No," Dallas said. "Today we just didn't capitalize when we could have and it cost us. If we lose another one it could

Women kickers keep rolling

The Riverwomen just kept rolling along last weekend, adding two more victories to their unbeaten record. The Riverwomen, now 14-0-1, made easy work of the University of Missouri-Rolla and Eastern Illinois University, as both fell prey to UMSL's snow-balling victory total over the weekend.

Lately, it seems as if winning has become an obsession with the women, a habit, if you will. And as the word "habit" suggests, the UMSL kickers are now finding their winning ways hard to break. But over the weekend, it was the second-teamers playing victorious soccer for the Riverwomen.

As evidenced Friday and Saturday evening, the women kickers' substitutes propelled UMSL through some rough waters. A handful of starters was held out of action over the weekend because of minor injuries, but their replacements played more than adequate soccer.

As coach Ken Hudson said, "A lot of the injuries are just nagging. All of the girls should be able to return for postseason play, with the exception of Debbie Lewis (who is out with a broken leg)."

While some of the women are sidelined, Maureen Lee, Theresa Nappier, Karen Gettemeyer, Char Hudson and a host of others are picking up the slack.

"I'm not afraid to go to my bench. All the girls are very competent players," Hudson explained.

Friday's contest against Rolla served as a prime example of UMSL's second-string efficiency. Playing without the services of five key starters, the Riverwomen went on to outscore UMR by a 3-0 margin.

Joan Gettemeyer opened the scoring at 9 minutes 50 seconds of the first half, kicking in an unassisted goal for a 1-0 UMSL lead. Joan's sister, Jan, followed at 24:29, hooking a free kick around a Rolla defensive wall for a 2-0 advantage.

In the second half, Maureen Lee, substituting for the injured Lewis, booted home UMSL's third and final goal at 58:02. That proved to be all of the scoring in the contest as Ruth Harker registered yet another shutout, her 11th of the year.

Even though the women won in somewhat fine fashion, Hudson felt there was much to be desired in their style of play. "We were sluggish throughout the game," he said. "We ran the ball with them and didn't break into our own game until the second half. Maybe the cold weather affected us."

However, the women weren't finished yet. The kickers bombarded their way through a 6-1 rout of Eastern Illinois the following afternoon.

Leading UMSL's barrage of offense was Karen Lombardo. She proved to be the big gun for UMSL, scoring three goals while tallying one assist. Nappier and Hudson each added a single score, while Nappier and Karen Gettemeyer each provided an assist.

"Lombardo really needs to pick up the slack while some of the other girls are out with injuries," Hudson said.

Still platooning for injured players Saturday night, the women worked together as a team as they have throughout the season. And now, with only one

Intramural grid playoffs down to final four

Ronn Tipton

The number of teams still alive in the intramural football playoffs is down to four. Four teams were eliminated in Tuesday's quarterfinals, while the other four hopefuls will be in action today in the semifinals. The finals will be held next Tuesday at 3 p.m.

Tuesday's quarterfinals contests featured a pair of extremely exciting games and two others that featured strong defenses. Both the Jets and NCFT had to go into overtime before claiming victory, while the Grave Diggers and Pi Kappa Alpha shut out their opposition to advance to the semifinal round.

The Jets defeated Tau Kappa Epsilon in overtime, 20-14. They will meet the Grave Diggers, who blanked Sigma Tau, 12-0, at 3 p.m. today.

In the other quarterfinal games, NCFT needed an extra period to down Poker Twice, 6-0, while Pi Kappa Alpha triumphed over ROTC, 14-0. The two winners will meet today at 4 p.m.

Turning to the football regular season, and the scores of the final games that were played last week: last Tuesday, the Grave Diggers over CNC 22-0, and NCFT over Fighting Iris 14-0 due to a Fighting Iris forfeit. Thursday's scores were Tekes 14, Papal Bulls 6, and Sig Tau 14, Sig Pi 0. Sig Tau also won by forfeit.

The overall division standings are as follows: Division 1: Jets 5-1, Poker Twice 4-2, ROTC 2-2-2, No Names 1-5 and Wild Dogs 0-6; Division 2: Pikes 4-0-2, Sig Tau 4-1-1, Tekes 3-0-3. Papal Bulls 2-4 and Sig Pi forfeited out; Division 3: NCFT 5-0-1, Grave Diggers 4-1-1, CNC 0-6 and Fighting Iris forfeited out. The top three offenses were NCFT-144 points scored, Grave Diggers-124 points, and the Jets-98 points. The top three defenses were Tekes-12 points given up, Sig Tau-14 points, and Pikes-17 points. Special awards should also go to the Tekes, for tying the most games (3), and to CNC, for giving up more than twice as many points as any other team.

intramural report

Turning to intramural soccer, one finds the standings looking like this - East Division: Out of Steamers 2-0, Pikes 1-0, F.U.B.A.R. 1-1, Green Eagles 0-1, and Merging Greeks 0-2. West Division (as of last Thursday): Deans 1-0 Papal Bulls 1-0, D.B.'s Troopers 0-1, and ROTC 0-1.

Last week's games included Out of Steamers beating Green Eagles 3-1, F.U.B.A.R. winning by forfeit over Merging Greeks, Papal Bulls trouncing ROTC 4-0, and the Deans winning by forfeit over D.B.'s Troopers. Monday's games were both shutouts because Out of Steamers beat F.U.B.A.R. 1-0 and the Pikes won over Merging Greeks by the same score. Greg Wherry got the goal for the Pikes and was assisted by Louis Trevino. John Eagan got the shutout. Yesterday's games were the Deans vs. ROTC and the Papal Bulls vs. D.B.'s Troopers. Games scheduled for next week are Monday - Pikes vs. Green Eagles at 3 p.m. and Merging Greeks vs. Out of Steamers at 4 p.m.; Wednesday - ROTC vs. D.B.'s Troopers at 3 p.m. and Papal Bulls vs. ROTC at 4 p.m.

Moving on to volleyball, one finds that no games were played last Wednesday due to the World Series, but there was plenty of action Monday night. The only undefeated team left in league A in PEK at 5-0. It is followed by Chris' Team (4-1), Pike 1 (4-2), Beta Alpha Psi (3-3), Special Forces (2-3), the Squeegees (2-3), Zeta Sig Pi (1-4), and the Spikers (0-5). League A scores for Monday night were PEK over Special Forces 15-8, and 15-3; Pike 1 over the Squeegees 15-11, 17-15 and 15-4; Beta Alpha Psi over Chris' Team by default; Zeta Sig Pi over the Spikers by forfeit; PEK over Pike 1 15-11, 17-15, and 15-4; Chris' Team over Special Forces 15-13 and 15-13; and Beta Alpha Psi over Zeta Sig Pi 15-3 and 15-12.

League B scores included Phi Zappa Krappa winning over Pike 2 by forfeit, and the Spikes beating the Shrinques 15-7 and 15-2. Games that were played last night were Spikes vs. Tennis Team, Shrinques vs. Pike 2, Phi Zappa Krappa vs. Papal Bulls, Spikes vs. Papal Bulls, Phi Zappa Krappa vs. ROTC, Pike 2 vs. Tennis Team, Papal Bulls vs. ROTC, Zeta Sig Pi vs. Special Forces, and Shrinques vs. Tennis Team. The standings for League B are Tennis Team (2-0) and Phi Zappa Krappa (2-0) tied for first place and followed by the Papal Bulls (1-0), Spikes (3-1), Pike 2 (1-1), ROTC (1-1) and Shrinques (1-1).

Intramural Notes: Anyone wishing to report any intramural scores should call the Current at 553-5174 or 553-5175, or Ronn Tipton at 741-6028.

Women

game remaining in the regular season, the Riverwomen are eyeing an undefeated regular season. One more victory, over Quincy College Saturday evening, and they will have accomplished that feat.

"It's been a team effort all the way," explained Hudson.

What the women are really looking forward to, though, is another trip to Orlando, Fla., to take their shot at being national champions. And as coach Hudson sees it, "We have just as good of a chance at winning it than anyone else."

Season tickets now on sale

Season tickets for all home basketball games for the UMSL Rivermen are now available at the athletic department for all university employees and students at a reduced rate.

The 12-game package is being sold at $20 for adults and $10 for children 12 years old and under.

If interested, contact the athletic department at 553-5641.

Cage programs need volunteers

The UMSL basketball program is looking for volunteers to help at all home basketball games for the men's and women's teams this year.

Volunteers are needed to help operate the scoreboard and time clock, maintain statistics and sell tickets the night of the games.

For more information, call either Rich Mechfessel or Mike Larson at the athletic department at 553-5641.

Volleyball splits matches; eyes key MIAA foes

Kurt Jacob
reporter

The UMSL volleyball team is enjoying one of the most successful seasons in the school's history.

But it's success, unlike many other winning teams, is not due to one or two outstanding players. The squad is composed of "team" players and that team aspect has carried them to an impressive 14-7 record.

The Riverwomen chalked up one of those 14 victories last Saturday as they disposed of a tough Arkansas State University team, 15-11 and 16-14, before falling stubbornly to Indiana State University in the second match, 15-11, 14-16 and 9-15.

"Even though we split," coach Cindy Rech said, "I was very pleased with the way we played in both games.

"We played well together like we have all year; everybody contributed."

Several members of the team played exceptionally well Saturday. Among those were seniors Judy Rosener, Sue Durrer and Janet Taylor.

"These three have been steady players all year," Rech said. "They played very well Saturday in both matches.

"Sue played extremely well defensively."

Junior Darlene Bohnert and sophomores Shelly Hirner and Cheri Versemann also did more than their share in Saturday's contests.

"Shelly was very valuable at the net and on defense Saturday," Rech explained, "and Cheri came off the bench and played well as a hitter."

Rech also commented on the aggressive play of Debbie Shores, who hasn't been playing much but contributed a lot in Saturday's doubleheader.

After dumping Arkansas State in two games, UMSL looked as if it was headed for a sweep when it won the first game of the second match, 15-11. But suddenly, things fell apart and Indiana State came back to win the final two games.

"We fell apart mentally," Rech conceded. "We still performed well physically but our mental game went downhill."

After being down 13-10 in the second game, the women netters came back to tie the score at 14 and had the chance to go ahead in the game but fell just short.

"It was a close game and we had the opportunity to win," Rech said, "but we just needed that little something to get us over the hump.

"We came back and made it close but we couldn't quite pull it out."

In the third and final game, the visiting Sycamores ran off with a 15-9 win and the match.

"We just let up," Rech said, "and you can't afford to do that against a team like Indiana State.

"We've had two or three matches earlier this year that we didn't win because we didn't concentrate," she added, "but Saturday we played well, they just outplayed us."

The UMSL team will now look to the next few weeks and the important matches ahead. And though they've run up an impressive won-loss mark, they can't afford to let up now.

"I think our 14-7 record is a very good accomplishment but we've got to keep playing well consistently," Rech said.

"We've got some tough matches coming up against teams like Central Missouri and Southeast Missouri and we can't afford to let up," she added.

UMSL, who will take on these two Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association foes today in the Mark Twain gym, has accomplished a lot this season. But the season isn't over yet.

And when the first-ever MIAA postseason tournament rolls around Nov. 12, the UMSL volleyball team might enjoy even further success.

Will the Rivermen peak out of their late season slump? Will the Rivermen go to the postseason playoffs? Will the Rivermen win the NCAA Division II title? For the answers to these questions and more tune in next week.
