Preface and Acknowledgements

This finding aid represents the fruition of years of effort in arranging and describing the papers of John W. Barriger III, one of this century's most distinguished railroad executives. It will serve the needs of scholars for many years to come, guiding them through an extraordinary body of papers documenting the world of railroading in the first two-thirds of this century across all of North America.

In every endeavor, there are individuals for whom the scope of their involvement and the depth of their participation makes them a unique participant in events of historical importance. Such was the case with John Walker Barriger III (1899-1976), whose many significant roles in the American railroad industry over almost a half century from the 1920s into the 1970s not only made him one of this century's most important railroad executives, but which also permitted him to participate in and witness at close hand the enormous changes which took place in railroading over the course of his career.

For many men, simply to participate in the decisions and events such as were part of John Barriger's life would have been enough. But John Barriger did more—he intensively collected and preserved the written record of many of railroading's important events in the voluminous files which constitute his personal papers. Over his lifetime, he assembled what has been widely regarded as one of the largest and finest personal manuscript collections in the nation devoted to all aspects of railroading in this century.

At his death, Mr. Barriger's papers, photographs and his extensive personal library passed to his sons and a daughter, John W. Barriger IV, Stanley H. Barriger, and Ann B. Salyard. Desiring to make the papers as accessible as possible to the broadest spectrum of railroad history researchers and working railroaders alike, they together in 1982 graciously donated the collection, along with their father's large personal library of books on railroading and other subjects, and extensive railroad photograph collection, to the St. Louis Mercantile Library Association. With the books and photographs, the John W. Barriger III Papers form the foundation for the Mercantile Library's John W. Barriger III National Railroad Library, which is today the nation's largest rail transportation special collection.

The St. Louis Mercantile Library wishes to thank the Barriger family for their present and past support in donating this collection, and making it accessible through the John W. Barriger III National Railroad Library. It is a most valued portion of the Barriger Library's collections, and has served the needs of thousands of researchers from across the nation and around the world, amply fulfilling the vision which John Barriger had in a lifetime of collecting activity, and which his children had in donating the collection and in creating the Barriger Railroad Library to house it.

Appreciation and thanks are also extended to various staff members and the Board of Direction of the Mercantile Library, the Board of Trustees of the Barriger Railroad Library, and our dedicated volunteer typists. All of these have given strong support to this project and brought it to completion over a period of many years of intensive work. Finally, the Mercantile Library also sincerely thanks the National Historical Publications and Records Commission for the generous grant which made possible the arrangement, preservation and initial description of the Barriger Papers.

Scope and Content Notes

The John W. Barriger III Papers, Series 1, Corporate Records, holds 219 records cartons containing documents reflecting many aspects of the history, services, operations, engineering, finance and management of 376 railroads or holding companies, government agencies, and a few other business entities related to the railroad industry, and generally dating from circa 1910 to circa 1976, with the strongest concentration in records from the time of the Great Depression. Virtually all material in all of the collection had its origin from various internal files of railroads, corporations or agencies with which John W. Barriger III was associated over the course of his long and distinguished career in the railroad industry.

Series 1 is divided into 376 subseries. Each Subseries represents the records associated with a single railroad, holding company, agency or other business entity and their subsidiaries and related companies.

Most Subseries are undivided into smaller sub-subseries. The larger and more complex Subseries are, however, further divided into sub-subseries. The divisions vary by each Subseries depending on the material present, but generally follow the following content groupings. These content grouping may or may not exist for a given railroad or corporation, depending on the material present. They also sometimes exist individually, and are sometimes combined, depending on the material present in the Subseries.

These content groupings together also give the user an overview of the types of documents present in Series 1 overall.

General Descriptive Material

Includes general descriptions of the history of a company; magazine and newsletter articles and clippings; and public relation material including news releases, promotional brochures, and educational materials. Some maps and charts are occasionally combined in this material. Speeches by executives and managers often included in this material.

Passenger Service

Includes public timetables and promotional brochures for passenger train service, and articles, clippings and brochures on scheduled passenger service as well as special passenger trains and excursions.

Mail and Express Service

Includes documents which describe railroad operations in handling U.S. Mail, parcel post, and express freight, such as for the Railway Express Agency, usually in scheduled passenger service. This material is found in a sub-subseries for only a few railroads.

Maps and Charts

Includes maps of various types, mainly general skeleton line maps for railroad companies or operating division. Also includes many schematic diagrams of rail lines and service facilities located along the tracks. Maps and charts of various types are also found interfiled in all other content groups.

Freight Service

Includes documents on freight operations, such as employee timetables (which may also show passenger operations); operating manuals; blocking charts and schedules; traffic statistics; information and rosters of freight cars and other equipment; information on rates, tariffs, and solicitation of freight traffic; and correspondence, memoranda and reports related to freight service. Sometimes combined with material on Operations or Engineering.

Operations

Includes documents on many aspects of railroad train operations, such as operating procedures manuals, rule books, employee timetables (which may also show passenger operations), facilities related to train operations, and correspondence, memoranda and reports related to train operations.

Motor and Marine Transport

Includes documents on operation of subsidiary and related trucking companies and drayage operations for intermodal freight service and off-track pick-up and delivery service, and the operations of car ferries and car floats. This material is found in a separate sub-subseries only for the Pennsylvania Railroad. For other railroads, where present, it is usually found in Operations or Freight Service.

Mechanical

Includes documents on many aspects of railway engineering as it relates to rolling stock, that is, to locomotives and cars, both steam and diesel, and passenger and freight. Sometimes combined with material on Freight Service, Operations or Engineering.

Engineering

Documents on many aspects of railway engineering as it relates to the railroad fixed plant: track and structures. Includes track charts and condensed profiles; valuation maps and plats; charts and maps of facilities and structures; rail charts; information and charts on signal systems, interlockings, and other facilities affecting train dispatching operations; and correspondence, memoranda and reports on such facilities, their design, and their operation. Sometimes combined with material on Freight Service and Operations.

Executive, Managerial and Financial Documents

Documents in this content grouping/sub-subseries describe aspects of a company's business as dealt with at the senior management and executive level. Included are correspondence, memoranda and reports concerning overall corporate matters and general management, including general aspects of business strategic planning; mergers, consolidations and joint operating agreements; reports and data for directors; legal documents and Interstate Commerce Commission filings and testimonies; documents relating to financing and financial reports and memoranda, particularly mortgages, stock issues and bonds; biographical information about executives and senior managers and directors; and the numerous reports of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation (RFC) on various railroads related to financings arranged through Mr. Barriger's office during his tenure as Chief Examiner of the RFC's Railroad Division in the Franklin D. Roosevelt administration.

Annual Reports

Corporate and subsidiary annual reports, principally from circa 1920 into the 1970s; also some ICC annual reports (Schedule A and Form R-1) and some SEC Form 10-K documents.

Introduction to the Collection

The John W. Barriger III Papers, Series 1, are one of several manuscript collections of the John W. Barriger III National Railroad Library, a special collection of the St. Louis Mercantile Library Association. The Library and the Barriger Papers are open to the public during the Library's regular hours. Use of the collection by the public is encouraged. Membership in the St. Louis Mercantile Library Association is not required to use the collection.

Researchers planning to use the collection should use this finding aid, or a computer-searchable database at the Library, to locate items in which they are interested. These can then be requested for retrieval by the Library's staff for an on-site visit. Appointments for research at the Library are recommended, but not required. Materials in this collection do not circulate outside the Library.

Materials in this guide are listed by box and folder number.

In addition to the resources of this collection in Series 1, the Barriger Railroad Library holds other series of John W. Barriger III Papers, which include information on foreign railroads, trade associations, the Prince Plan of Railroad Consolidation which Mr. Barriger spearheaded in the early 1930s, personal correspondence, manuscripts and speeches, and subject files on many topics related to railroad operations, engineering, regulation and management. These are separately described in other finding aids. There are also approximately 40,000 books on railroad subjects, and other large manuscript collections, such as the Isabel Benham Papers, the Archives of The Milwaukee Road, and the ACF Industries Archival Collection, the Charles Rupp Railroad Timetable Collection, and the GM&O Historical Society Collection to provide railroad historical researchers with information about many railroads. Researchers may contact the Mercantile Library's curatorial staff and its Barriger Railroad Library concerning use of the collection at the following address:

John W. Barriger III and His Rail History Collection

John Walker Barriger III was born in Dallas, Texas on December 3, 1899, the son of John Walker Barriger, Jr., a civil engineer who worked extensively in the railroad industry, and Edith Beck Barriger. Early in the young Barriger's life his family moved to St. Louis, where he attended Central High School. Even in his youth, he was deeply interested in railroading, and after high school he began work for the Pennsylvania Railroad (PRR) as a shop hand at its vast Altoona Shops complex. Furloughed from service with the PRR to further his education, he attended Massachusetts Institute of Technology, home of one of the nation's most prestigious railroad civil engineering programs. While at MIT, Barriger again worked summers for the Pennsylvania in various positions in the maintenance-of-way department, and after graduation in 1921 he went to work for the PRR full-time. He left the Pennsylvania in 1927 while holding the position of assistant yardmaster at Altoona, and went to work on Wall Street for Kuhn, Loeb & Co. as a securities analyst. While still with the Pennsylvania Railroad, he married Elizabeth Thatcher of St. Louis in September, 1926.

In October 1929, at the beginning of the great stock market crash, Barriger left Kugh, Loeb and went to work for the investment firm of Calvin Bullock & Co., where he managed its railroad investment arm, International Carriers, Ltd. His growing reputation as a railroad expert attracted the attention of Frederick H. Prince of Boston, at that time one of the most important railroad investors in the nation. Prince had been solicited by the newly-elected Franklin D. Roosevelt to develop a plan for railroad consolidation. Financed by Prince, Barriger and a team of young associates set up shop in the Metropolitan Club in Washington from February to May of 1933 to sort through reams of data and develop a consolidation plan. Barriger's plan, which became known as the Prince Plan of Railroad Consolidation, envisioned consolidation of the nation's hundreds of railroads into only seven, large integrated systems.

His work on Wall Street and on the Prince Plan led to appointment in 1934 as Chief Examiner of the Railroad Division of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. There, Barriger and his associates evaluated and recommended some $1.5 billion in vital federal loans to the nation's railroads. In a Depression-wracked nation, the RFC's loans and securities underwritings were of enormous benefit to the railroad industry. Many loans went for working capital and facilities renewal, debt refinancings, and the purchase of some of the earliest diesel locomotives and lightweight, streamlined passenger trains. But RFC financing also underwrote some of the most notable large-scale capital projects of the century, including the massive completion of electrification on the Pennsylvania's route between New York and Washington, and the construction of the Dotsero Cutoff on the Denver & Rio Grande Western, which opened up the important Moffat Tunnel route across the Rockies. Near the end of his service with the RFC, Barriger served as reorganization manager of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, and then on C&EI's executive committee in 1941-42.

During World War II, Barriger moved to another position in Washington as associate director of the rail transportation division of the Office of Defense Transportation. In that important wartime position in 1942 he served as federal manager of the Toledo, Peoria & Western, which ODT had seized under wartime powers in response to a bitter strike. From 1942 to 1946, he also served as a director of the Alton Railroad, and as a consultant to a management conference committee on railroad wages, and to the American Railroad of Puerto Rico. He returned to the private sector in 1943 as a vice president of Frederick Prince's Union Stockyards & Transit Co., which managed the vast Union Stock Yards of Chicago, and with which he would retain a relationship for many years to come. Then from 1944 to 1946 he worked as manager of the diesel division of Fairbanks-Mores & Co., which was seeking its share of the promising postwar diesel locomotive market.

All of this experience led to Barriger's first railroad presidency, of the Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville, or Monon, a position he held from 1946 through 1952. For five months in early 1953 he then worked as a vice president for the New York, New Haven & Hartford, before moving to the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific as a vice president from 1953 to 1956. Then from 1956 to 1964 he served as president of the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie (P&LE), a prosperous subsidiary of the New York Central (NYC) which served the then-booming heavy industrial belt between Pittsburgh and Youngstown, Ohio. During this period, in 1956, Barriger published his famous book, Super-Railroads for a Dynamic American Economy, in which he laid out the comprehensive theory of rail transportation economics which he had developed over his far-ranging career.

After mandatory retirement from the NYC – P&LE at age 65 in 1964, Barriger worked briefly as a consultant to the St. Louis-San Francisco (Frisco) in St. Louis. By now well-known as the “doctor of sick railroads”, he was approached about the presidency of the seriously ailing Missouri-Kansas-Texas, or Katy. He held that position and Katy's chairmanship from 1965 to 1970, rehabilitating its track, locomotives, cars, spotty service, and poor bottom line, and gradually making it a suitable merger partner for a larger system.

Still not ready to retire, Barriger took the presidency of the equally ailing Boston & Maine from 1970 to 1973, holding the company together during its reorganization, and making some progress in rebuilding its finances and service. Then it was back to government service as a special assistant to the new Federal Railroad Administrator, a position he held under John Ingram and Asaph Hall until April 1976, when at Ingram's invitation he left FRA to assist Ingram as he worked desperately to hold the Rock Island together and improve its meager prospects. It was in that position, still as a working railroader (“senior traveling freight agent”, one of his favorite titles since the Katy days), and proud that he never retired from the business which he loved, that John Barriger passed away in St. Louis on December 9, 1976.

The documents in Series 1 have their origins in John Barriger's broad range of experience in the railroad industry. His service with the Pennsylvania Railroad, and his time on Wall Street with Kuhn, Loeb and Calvin Bullock are all represented. The largest portion of the documents in Series 1 date from his work with the RFC from 1933 to 1941, a crucial period in American history. Documents from the period of his wartime management of the strike-torn TP&W, from his long relationship with the Union Stockyards & Transit Co., and particularly from all four of his railroad presidencies and his two vice presidencies, may also be found in depth in Series 1.

The Barriger Railroad Library holds many other materials which, together with the papers in Series 1, form an excellent resource for railroad historical scholarship. Other series of the Barriger papers, described separately in other finding aids, hold material on foreign railroads and trade associations; Barriger's Prince Plan working papers; subject files on many aspects of railway economics, operation, management, regulation, engineering and technology; and extensive files of personal correspondence, articles, speeches, and manuscripts by Barriger and others active in railroading, business, engineering and other fields.

John Barriger's extensive photographic collection, comprising approximately 50,000 images for more than 200 railroads, also correlated with many of the documents in Series 1 and other series of the Barriger Papers, providing a detailed visual record of North American's railroads from circa 1917 to 1970, particularly the track, structures, yards and other facilities which are described, mapped and analyzed in many documents in Series 1 of the Barriger Papers.
