Snowstorm shuts down campus

St. Louis' worst snowstorm in about 70 years resulted in the closing of classes for the first part of this week. As of Wednesday, most of the parking lots were yet to be cleared and additional snowfall was making snow removal difficult.

To make matters worse, the university's lone snow plow broke down early in the week and the university had to contract with an outside company to have the lots plowed.

According to one grader operator, the snow had drifted to as much as three feet on some parking lots, adding that these lots had probably not been plowed since the snow started to fall. The operator had called for additional help, but said he did not know how long it would take to clear the lots.

Current sports to be action packed

Next week, the Current sports pages will take a look at the following stories: Rivermen basketball and its games against SIU-E and MIAA rival Central Missouri State University. The Rivermen hit the center stage when they play SIU-E as the game is being played at the Checkerdome. The women cagers travel to Southeast Missouri State University, University of Missouri-Rolla and then come home to host Lincoln University. The Current will report on the action from these games and give you an insight at how the Riverwomen have suffered since the loss of starting center Karen Lauth.

Also in the sports pages will be a preview as well as a story on the SLACAA swimming meet that was held at UMSL's pool last weekend. We will report on what the UMSL swimmers did and what their opponents did.

Finally, we will outline the new intramural season and tell you why intramural director Larry Coffin has imposed a $10 forfeit fee for all participating teams.

On the features side, we'll take a look at two past UMSL basketball greats and show you how they moved from on the court to the side of the court as coaches.

And of course, the sports page will take another look at the UMSL sports world from the view of columnist Jeff Kuchno.

Faculty concerned

There are times when the weather does not matter. Last Tuesday, about 200 faculty members fought snow, slush and ice-covered streets to attend a faculty hearing about proposed budget cuts over the next three years. The money saved by the cuts is to go toward faculty salaries, but the proposed program reductions are too much for some faculty members to bear.

University of Missouri President James C. Olson has requested that UMSL set aside $3.75 million over the next three years. That figure would represent a total cutback of 14.25 percent.

In next week's Current we will outline the proposed reductions and relay the feelings of faculty and students on program cuts.

Current staff braves snow

No one ever said working on the Current would be a slice of heaven, especially when there is a paper to put out amidst one of the worst snowstorms in St. Louis history.

The Current staff members made many sacrifices to put this issue out. Battling the ice and snow covered streets of the St. Louis area, Current staffers braved their ways to the Blue Metal Building on the snowy UMSL campus to share an evening that they would rather have missed.

The first problem encountered by many staff members was how to persuade mom and dad into letting them use the family car to drive to UMSL. Secondly, once they got the car, they had to fight Mother Nature and severe traffic jams just to get to the Current offices.

And once everyone was here, what happened ... you're looking at it. The Current staff thought a change of pace might be appropriate for an issue that almost lost to a snow blizzard.

Oh, but Mother Nature strikes again. Snow came falling once again and staff members scattered... some of them did anyway. One staff member said, "the hell with it" and bunked out in the Current office.

So, after a few days without a warm meal, clean clothes and a shower, a dedicated few share the UMSL snowstorm with you. We're gonna get cleaned up for next week's issue.

Bond recommends $170.4 million university budget

Gov. Christopher Bond is recommending $170.4 million for the UM system in 1982-83 state appropriations, approximately the same amount that has been appropriated by the legislature for the past two years. Ten percent of this year's state appropriations, however, was withheld by the governor because of a decrease in state revenue.

In response to the governor's latest recommendation, UM President James C. Olson said it represents a supportive attitude toward the university. "My hope is that the state revenue situation will enable the General Assembly to support such a recommendation," he said.

Olson said he also hopes Missourians will become better acquainted with the state's fiscal difficulty and support ways of generating additional revenue for the state.

"The university has achieved a great deal in enlisting private support and in the management of current resources. But we cannot sustain the quality institution we all want without improved state financing for existing programs, the physical plant and employees," the UM President said.

The House and Senate appropriations committees must still make recommendations for higher education appropriations. The General Assembly will decide on the committees' recommendations before its session ends April 30. UM originally submitted a request for $199.5 million in state funds and the Coordinating Board for Higher Education recommended $189.8 million.

Rivermen continue playing seesaw season

GIVE IT BACK: Rivermen's starting center Ronnie Tyler looks as though he is losing the ball to the opponents. The Rivermen lost the ball several times this past week as they lost two important MIAA games to Northeast Missouri State University and Northwest Missouri State University.

Ronn Tipton

After playing three games this past week, the UMSL Rivermen Basketball team has begun to show a pattern, a pattern closely resembling a roller coaster track. Down and up and down and up.

The Rivermen won over Rockhurst College of Kansas City last Thursday night to start the week on a high spot. However, the glory did not stick around as the cagers, now 2-6 in the MIAA lost two straight conference games to drop their record to 10-10.

They lost to Northeast Missouri State Saturday night at Kirkville and then came home to lose to the Northwest Missouri State Bearcats, who are now in first place in the MIAA.

The game was very close, and UMSL led at halftime 31-28. But the Bearcats came back in the second half, and had the lead with just minutes left in the game. With about ten seconds left, Richard "Bird" Hamilton went in for the tying basket, but was called for charging. Head coach Tom Bartow said, "I saw Bird get the rebound and power to the basket, but I didn't see him knock over anybody." The Bearcats then made the resulting free throws and iced the game up.

The Northeast game was different because of the fact that it wasn't so close all of the way through. Assistant coach Jerry Zykan commented, "We played very well in the first half, so we were only down by one point at halftime. However, during the second half, they switched from their man to man defense to a zone defense. That caused us to go about five possessions in a row without scoring. As a result, we went from two points down to ten points down."

'RIVERMEN NOTES: The Rivermen continue their MIAA See "Game," page 8

Women cagers lose two games; find life on the road miserable

Jim Schnurbusch

In the midst of their longest road trip of the season, the Riverwomen have found life on the road to be very difficult.

The problems started for the Riverwomen cagers when they traveled to Evansville, Indiana to play the University of Evansville.

Without starting center Karen Lauth, who was sidelined with an injured wrist, the Riverwomen dropped their initial road game of the long stretch, 69-59.

After taking a week off to recoup, the Riverwomen packed back into their traveling van and headed west to Kansas City where an always tough University of Missouri-Kansas City squad awaited them.

Friday night is usually an active time in Kansas City. It was last Friday night, but not for the Riverwomen.

Sandy Moore, Riverwoman starting forward, explained what happened in the loss to UMKC, "Kansas City is a really good team. We played bad."

The women lost 89-70.

The bright spots for the Riverwomen were Renee Skaggs and Sandy Moriarty. Moriarty led the women cagers in scoring for the evening with 19 points.

Somehow, before last Saturday night's burying snowfall in the St. Louis area, Riverwomen managed to find their way across the Show Me state to their next foe, Northeast Missouri State University in Kirksville.

"We stayed Friday night in Kansas City. We left at 8:30 Saturday morning and got there at 1:45," commented Moore about the ride from Kansas City to Kirksville.

The women were part of a twinbill doubleheader of sorts. They were the opening act before the Rivermen faced the NEMO men's squad. The women had to be weary after the trip to Kirksville as they stepped on the court to face their opponents.

The Riverwomen opened what turned out to be losing efforts by both UMSL squads.

Facing a fresh NEMO team, the women cagers found themselves on the short end of a 69-48 decision.

Rivermen get court time regardless rain or shine

Neither rain nor sleet nor snow is supposed to stop the mailman. Well, even the postal service was outdone this week by the UMSL Rivermen basketball team.

A massive snowstorm, the worst to hit St. Louis in 70 years, struck here earlier this week and the repercussions were felt everywhere. Businesses, schools and roads were shut down. Concerts and lectures were cancelled. Even the mailman failed to deliver.

But somehow UMSL decided it wouldn't hurt to play its game against Northwest Missouri State Monday night at UMSL. After all, how many people could be scared away by 18 inches of snow?

The answer: Just about everybody.

About 50 people showed up Monday night, that is if you include players, coaches, officials, trainers and water boys. Attendance at UMSL basketball games this has been poor, but the turnout could have been above average Monday night had it not been for the snow. The reason is that more than 1,000 tickets had been sold in advance.

"We played Chicago-Circle two years ago in one of the worst snowstorms in Chicago history," head coach Tom Bartow said. "It would cost a lot of money to postpone a game and then have to travel to that city again."

From the standpoint of public image, though, not cancelling a game when even Santa Claus would have stayed home was a bad move. It's possible that the fans UMSL did have before Monday night won't come back. And the Rivermen need some fans.

To add insult to injury, the Rivermen lost the kuchno's korner

key MIAA contest, 54-51. It was perhaps a fitting comment on a season that has been extremely disappointing for those who expected to see the Rivermen live up to their advanced billing.

It's been mentioned before, maybe too often, that the Rivermen were pre-season favorites to capture the MIAA title. They have more talent on one team than any other in the conference, but the culmination of that skill admittedly has not reached its potential.

Among the possible reasons for UMSL's mild downfall include the season-long absence of Reggie Clabon, lack of intensity in key games, but above all, lack of chemistry. The Rivermen have struggled this year because the overabundance of talented players has failed to come together as a team.

Clabon, who would have been a senior, suffered a stress fracture in his ankle prior to the season and was redshirted. Reggie was an integral part of last year's 17-9 club. He wasn't much of a scorer, but he filled the point-guard role extremely well and was an outstanding defensive player.

This year, William Harris and Bob McCormack have shared the point-guard spot. Both players, however, are better scorers than playmakers and that has bogged down the offense.

McCormack, one of UMSL's prize recruits, is out for an indefinite period because of a recurring knee injury that sidelined him in high school. After a blazing start, McCormack began to take a backseat to fellow freshman Kurt Jacob. Since both could be starting at most Division II schools, it's been tough for either to sit on the bench.

Others have griped about a lack of playing time, which hasn't helped the situation at all. It's too bad only five players can play at a time.

After opening the MIAA slate with a win over Southeast Missouri State, the Rivermen lost four conference games in a row before winning again. During that skid, UMSL became frustrated and started pressing. The players wondered how a team with so much talent could be losing.

Perhaps it's because basketball games are won on the court, not on paper. Being picked to win the conference before the season starts is a dangerous position to be placed in, and it has played a big part in spoiling UMSL's season.

Fortunately, the Rivermen can still advance to the national tournament if they capture the MIAA post-season tournament. Northeast Missouri State was a mediocre team during the regular season last year, but came on strong down the stretch and nabbed the post-season title by upsetting league powers Lincoln and Central Missouri State. The Rivermen have what it takes to pull the same trick.

Let's just hope it doesn't snow.

MAURICE BUCHANAN TURNED DOWN A BASKETBALL SCHOLARSHIP FOR AN ARMY ROTC SCHOLARSHIP.

"I knew I needed to go to college. I needed to get that ticket punched to be successful," says Maurice. "Why did I select an Army ROTC scholarship over a basketball scholarship? Because I knew I'd have a job after graduation. And that's more than a lot of my peers could say. "I may stay in the military. But if I decide to get out, I've got the best job reference in the world—a commission in the United States Army."

Army ROTC can do the same for you.

Qualify, and you can win an ROTC scholarship, as Maurice did. Each scholarship covers tuition, books, and more.

But even if you don't win one, as an ROTC cadet, you'll still receive financial assistance. Up to $1,000 a year for your last two years of ROTC.

If you'd like a job waiting for you after college, do what Maurice Buchanan did.

Apply for an Army ROTC scholarship. Today.

And begin your future as an officer.
