				Dates: May 15- June 10. Prerequisite of "Consent of Instructor" has been waived for summer session.            The first class session, May 15, will meet in Clark 106. Students will drive to Excelsior Springs on that date. All other classes will meet in the field from 9:00 am - 3:30 pm:            This course will be working with the City of Excelsior Springs, Missouri. We will be excavating a historic mineral spring area once nationally known for its mineral waters.            These waters were prescribed to remedy all sorts of ailments and to promote overall good health.            The spring area has been sporadically flooded through the years resulting in great damage and eventual destruction of the bottling plant and pavilions. This year, we hope to relocate the lost pavilions and bottling plant and learn more about the visitors            to this popular turn of the century tourist attraction by what they left behind. Students will be staying at the nearby group lodge at Lake Mauer. During the field school, students will gain valuable experience in excavating, mapping, surveying, artifact analysis, and many other important skills necessary for any archaeological excavation.            Additional Travel Fee- $225 per student.            Additional travel fee required and can be paid by calling 314-516-7454 or by visiting http://pscatalog.umsl.edu/. Through the Viewfinder            Instructor: Elizabeth Eikmann            Topic: Through the Viewfinder: Gender, Race, Class, and Sexuality in American Photography            Same as SOC 2192 001 and HONORS 2030 002            "In America, the photographer is not simply the person who records the past, but the one who invents it." –Susan Sontag, On Photography.            This course will investigate how photographs have not only "invented" our collective historical memory, but also our ideas about gender, race, class, and sexuality. This course will introduce students to gender, feminist, and visual culture theories, as well as contemporary American Studies approaches to visual analysis. We will examine photographs as cultural texts, paying particular attention to the ways in which photographs are both influenced by and shape ideas about gender, race, class, and sexuality. We will also visit several St. Louis cultural institutions to explore first-hand how photographs are used by public historians and artists on a daily basis. By the end of the semester, students will have a good working knowledge of American photographic history, an understanding of some of the major theoretical trends in image-based feminist studies, and the ability to identify and utilize photographic images in their own research and writing.            Arts and Science Advising Fee applies. Please see Cashiers website for details.            Arts and Science Advising Fee applies. Please see Cashiers website for details.

			Women in Social Justice            Instructor: Karen Smyth            Topic: Women in Social Justice "What is social justice? How does one perform social justice, and in how many ways? Is anything we do really going to make a difference? These are just the first questions we will tackle in this course on women and social justice. This course will highlight women's participation, leadership, and experiences in social justice movements, and in doing so will emphasize the ways in which race, class, religion, and other categories of identity and experience have impacted women's collective and individual approach to activism and social justice issues. We will unpack terms like oppression, privilege, racism, intersectionality, discrimination, allyship and more. We will examine a range of texts—from our textbooks and scholarly sources to popular articles, blog posts, popular media, movies, commercials, and YouTube, to name a few—to understand what it means to advocate for social justice in today's society; what roles gender norms and power structures play in identity formation, what systems of oppression and privilege are in place; and we will use a framework of feminist theory through which we can work toward greater justice and freedom in both personal and global settings." Same as SOC 2192-002            Arts and Science Advising Fee applies. Everyday Life in Latin America                  This course is a survey of the history of medicine in Latin America, from the colonial period to the present days. Through readings, discussion, and individual research, students will gain an understanding of the social and cultural impacts of medical practice and policy in Latin America. We will follow a chronological format, focusing on various topics and regional variations. Emphasis will be placed on social implications of medicine, rather than the efficacy of specific treatments.                  Arts and Science Advising Fee applies. 									Through the Viewfinder Through the Viewfinder: Gender, Race, Class, and Sexuality in American Photography “In America, the photographer is not simply the person who records the past, but the one who invents it.” –Susan Sontag, On Photography. This course will investigate how photographs have not only “invented” our collective historical memory, but also our ideas about gender, race, class, and sexuality. This course will introduce students to gender, feminist, and visual culture theories, as well as contemporary American Studies approaches to visual analysis. We will examine photographs as cultural texts, paying particular attention to the ways in which photographs are both influenced by and shape ideas about gender, race, class, and sexuality. We will also visit several St. Louis cultural institutions to explore first-hand how photographs are used by public historians and artists on a daily basis. By the end of the semester, students will have a good working knowledge of American photographic history, an understanding of some of the major theoretical trends in image-based feminist studies, and the ability to identify and utilize photographic images in their own research and writing. Arts and Science Advising Fee applies. Please see Cashiers website for details.

Through the Viewfinder  Same as GS 2150 001 and HONORS 2030 002  Instructor: Elizabeth Eikmann  “In America, the photographer is not simply the person who records the past, but the one who invents it.” –Susan Sontag, On Photography.  This course will investigate how photographs have not only “invented” our collective historical memory, but also our ideas about gender, race, class, and sexuality. This course will introduce students to gender, feminist, and visual culture theories, as well as contemporary American Studies approaches to visual analysis. We will examine photographs as cultural texts, paying particular attention to the ways in which photographs are both influenced by and shape ideas about gender, race, class, and sexuality. We will also visit several St. Louis cultural institutions to explore first-hand how photographs are used by public historians and artists on a daily basis. By the end of the semester, students will have a good working knowledge of American photographic history, an understanding of some of the major theoretical trends in image-based feminist studies, and the ability to identify and utilize photographic images in their own research and writing.  Arts and Science Advising Fee applies. Please see Cashiers website for details.

Women in Social Justice Same as GS 2150 002 Topic: Women in Social Justice. Instructor: Karen Smyth "What is social justice? How does one perform social justice, and in how many ways? Is anything we do really going to make a difference? These are just the first questions we will tackle in this course on women and social justice. This course will highlight women's participation, leadership, and experiences in social justice movements, and in doing so will emphasize the ways in which race, class, religion, and other categories of identity and experience have impacted women's collective and individual approach to activism and social justice issues. We will unpack terms like oppression, privilege, racism, intersectionality, discrimination, allyship and more. We will examine a range of texts—from our textbooks and scholarly sources to popular articles, blog posts, popular media, movies, commercials, and YouTube, to name a few—to understand what it means to advocate for social justice in today's society; what roles gender norms and power structures play in identity formation, what systems of oppression and privilege are in place; and we will use a framework of feminist theory through which we can work toward greater justice and freedom in both personal and global settings." Arts and Science Advising Fee applies.
